MOVES AGAINST KLAN LEADER

Walton Causes Grand Dragon to Be Charged With Riot

SEQUEL OF MILITARY INQUIRY

Other Arrests Expected as the Result of the Oklahoma Governor's Crusade Against Klansmen—Governor Claims the Klan Is Whipped and That the Legislature Will Not Meet. Developments of the Day.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 22.—Governor J. C. Walton carried his war into the citadel of the "invisible empire" and caused N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the realm, to be charged with riot in connection with alleged disorders and terror.

The charge was preferred by County Attorney J. K. Wright, himself an admitted klansman, at the dictation of the military directorate. The complaint was filed before Justice of the Peace Leo White.

Several hours later Jewett was placed under arrest at his home. He was released on $1,000 bail shortly after a member of the sheriff's office took him into custody.

Action against the grand dragon came after several days' investigation by the military court of inquiry now sitting at military headquarters. Dr. A. A. Maupin, a dentist, and former klansman, was the witness relied upon chiefly for testimony to support the accusation made against Jewett. Maupin testified that Jewett participated in the flogging of E. R. Merriam here last year.

Jewett denied his guilt. "I never took part in a flogging or a riot in my life," he declared. "The testimony against me is a deliberate lie." While the governor thus continued to take the offensive, other arrests or charges are expected to be made involving prominent men of Oklahoma City.

Insofar as Governor Walton considers, the invisible empire is tottering, its power falling "before the greater, and the only constituted power of state government. The Klan is whipped," said Walton in an informal talk with press correspondents.

"And what about the legislature?" he was asked. "It is not going to meet," the governor interposed sharply. "It may attempt to, but that is all, you may be sure. Even if it did, it would not be a meeting of the legislature, the house of representatives, but a meeting of the Ku Klux Klan in 'rump' convention. Sixty-eight of the so-called legislative quorum are Klan members, including C. D. McBea, the leader."

In view of the governor's unshaken determination to block the legislative attempt to convene and the equally grim determination of the legislators, the approaching crisis on Wednesday is actually fraught with danger.

Frank M. Boyer, one of the committee of three which called the house of representatives for extra session, said, that the legislators would demand admission to the house chamber, would then go to the door some time Wednesday and demand entry and thus court a clash and arrest by the military.

The governor made public his second installment of "the story of Oklahoma," the story on which Jewett's accusation of riot was founded. It was prefaced with a statement by the governor who promised, in one passage, that: "I will show conclusively from the evidence that the jury room, the sheriff's office and the offices of the chiefs of police in both Tulsa and Oklahoma City are under control of the 'invisible empire.'" The governor charged further that he would show from the record that the Ku Klux Klan is a lawless and criminal organization. When he began his investigation of the order it shipped its records to Atlanta Ga., to prevent their seizure, the governor said.

Blackmail Alleged.

Boston, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Nathaniel Franklin Emmons, Boston society leader and cousin of Bishop William Lawrence, appeared in the municipal court to press charges of a $10,000 blackmail attempt. She said she was the victim of an attempt by Arthur LeBaron of New York, whom she befriended in the course of war welfare work in which she took an extensive part. The charge stated that LeBaron presented a letter to the society women alleged to have been written by her to a veteran and demanded $10,000 for its surrender.

ARRESTS EXPECTED

Conspiracy to Defame Name of Wife of Millionaire Alleged.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Speedy action, charging subornation of perjury and conspiracy to defame the name of Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, in the divorce case of her aged millionaire husband, W. E. D. Stokes, is expected to follow confessions of three persons that they had been offered money to swear that Mrs. Stokes had been an inmate of a disorderly house before her marriage to Stokes.

The witnesses were Thomas Flynn, former sergeant of police, and two women, Bernice Hoyt and Julia Yancy. The police will bend every effort to find the "higher ups" behind the offer of bribery to defame Mrs. Stokes. As the result of the testimony of the witnesses a writ was issued attaching the books of a South Side detective agency.

"I was approached by a man who I knew to be a private detective," Flynn told Assistant State's Attorney Charles F. Wharton. "He asked me if I would mind signing an affidavit that I had booked Mrs. Stokes under the name of 'Helen Norwood' after a raid on the notorious Everleigh club. He offered to make it worth while. I declined and reported the case to Mr. Erbstein" (Mrs. Stokes' attorney).

RAIL SITUATION IS TAKEN UP

Coolidge to Seek Counsel From Every Angle.

NOT COMMITTED TO ANY PLAN

President to Confer With the Authors of the Present Transportation Act, Members of the Interstate Commerce Commission and Others Who Have Made a Close Study of Railroad Problems.

Washington, Sept. 22.—Before President Coolidge outlines a policy for dealing with the transportation question, he is going to seek counsel from every angle bearing on the railroad situation, it was made known at the white-house.

An authorized spokesman for the president was emphatic in the assertion that the executive had not committed himself to any one plan. Nor does the president assume responsibility for statements emanating from the white house callers that undertake to commit him on this or other questions, it was asserted with equal emphasis.

Before arriving at a decision on the railroad question, it was declared, the president will confer with Senator Cummins, a veteran on transportation legislation and one of the authors of the present transportation act, members of the interstate commerce commission and others who have made a study of railroad problems. He will get the benefit of their knowledge before forming any mature opinion on what the government should do in the way of additional legislation.

Already the president has met two parties of railroad executives and one group of railroad labor leaders, who gave him impressions of the railroad situation from those two important angles.

It is known that the president has not committed himself on the transportation question, even to his closest advisers. The assertion that the president does not take responsibility for expressions of views other than those made through authorized channels was prompted by an interview given by a white house caller, Nathan L. Amster of Boston, president of the national citizens' railroad league, in effect, stated that the president looked with favor on the 18 regional group plan of railroad consolidation.

AMERICAN VESSELS REMAIN ON HIGH SEAS

New Plan Being Evolved By the Shipping Board.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The American merchant marine flag will continue to fly in the trade lanes and marts of the world, notwithstanding the opinion of Attorney General Daugherty, which scrapped the Lasker-Farley plan for their operation.

A new plan already has been evolved and is being prepared for presentation to President Coolidge. It provides for the lease to private corporations of trade routes and ships, with the government retaining control and title.

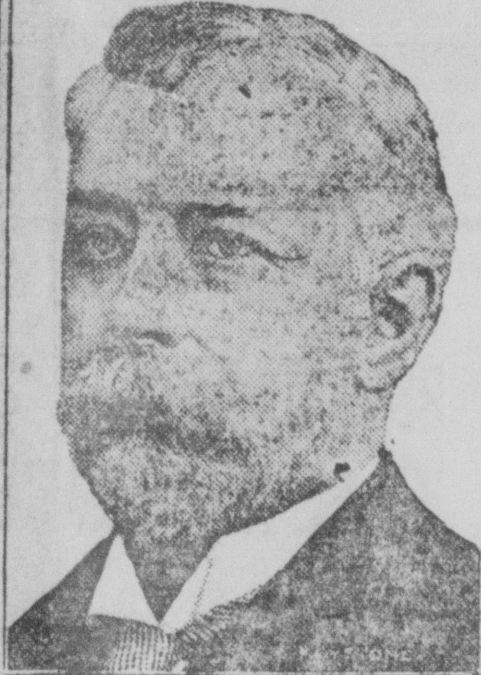

The new contemplated plan, it was stated, probably will be approved by the shipping board at a meeting Monday. It is said to overcome the legal objections raised by the attorney general in that there will be no exchange of stocks for the ships, but a lease, and that neither control of operation nor title will pass from the government's hands. In any event, it was emphasized both at the white house and the shipping board, the American merchant vessel is on the high seas to remain.

Donahay Urges Ouster Suit.

Columbus, Sept. 22.—Governor Donahay has renewed his request that Attorney General Crabbe bring suit in supreme court to oust George T. Poor of Cincinnati from membership on the public utilities commission. "I am still of the belief that the people of Ohio are entitled to an opinion of the Ohio supreme court determining the right of George T. Poor to hold office as a member of the utilities commission," Donahay said. "I earnestly renew my request of you to institute the proper proceedings."

HON. W. S. FIELDING

Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

URGES SPECIAL SESSION

Senator Dill Says Farmer Deserves Relief by the Government.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The tremendous pressure of the renewed demand for an extra session of congress to go to the rescue of the farmers is causing President Coolidge and his political advisers much concern. The president's ultimate action is awaited with extraordinary interest. In a telegram received from Senator C. C. Dill of Washington, the senator said: "A special session of congress is absolutely necessary immediately, if the government is to do justice to the farmers of the country this year. Everybody who has studied the situation knows that the farmers deserve relief by the government. The fact that there is no agreement on the exact legislation to be enacted is the strongest reason for immediately calling a special session."

Auto Goe Into Ditch.

Dayton, O., Sept. 22.—Rolla Snyder, 33, was instantly killed when the auto he was driving left the road and plunged into a ditch on the Dayton and Troy pike, near here.

DOINGS IN OHIO

State Schools Overcrowded.

Columbus, Sept. 22.—With increased enrollment expected at both the Ohio state school for blind and the state school for deaf, indications are that both schools will be overcrowded. The deaf school opened Wednesday and the enrollment now is 480. The enrollment was 539 last year, and about 600 students are expected this year. The enrollment, officials say, is far over the capacity of the building. At the school for blind a 20 per cent increase is expected.

Not in Presidential Race.

Cleveland, Sept. 22.—Governor Donahay will not be a candidate for the 1924 Democratic presidential nomination. He made this announcement, emphatically, upon his arrival in Cleveland. "Rumors that I am being considered for the presidential nomination or that I am considering becoming a candidate are absolutely unfounded," he said. "I would not consider it for a moment."

Suspect Bound Over.

Cleveland, Sept. 22.—Andrew Quinn, 22, was bound over to the grand jury in Judge Beebe's court here on charges of auto stealing, carrying concealed weapons and robbery. Bail was fixed at $12,000 for the three charges. Quinn was arrested with Harry Burrows, 16, and Gilbert Darnstadt, 17, charged with kidnaping Miss Florence Essig.

Result of Boys' Prank.

Niles, O., Sept. 22.—Five boys are under arrest here for stretching a chain between posts on either side of the Union cemetery entrance. When Mrs. Richard Phillips was driving into the cemetery to decorate her husband's grave, her machine struck the chain, wrecking the car and injuring Mrs. Phillips seriously.

Ends Life by Shooting.

Cincinnati, Sept. 22.—Losing all of his money in the failure of his restaurant at Greenfield, O., is believed by police to have been the cause for Nicholas Hedges, 26, to end his life by shooting himself in the right temple in a cafe near Cincinnati.

Car Company's Ultimatum.

Newark, O., Sept. 22.—The Columbus, Newark and Zanesville Railway company has issued an ultimatum to the city council that unless a satisfactory franchise is granted to replace the one now existing, cars will stop running on Oct. 31.

DENBY TO RETIRE FROM CABINET

Roosevelt to Succeed Him as Secretary of the Navy.

IS COOLIDGE'S OWN CHOICE

Plan Carries With It the Appointment of Secretary Denby to Another Post, Probably an Ambassadorship. Young Roosevelt, as Assistant Secretary, Has Had Active Part in Administration of Navy Department.

Washington, Sept. 22.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt of Oyster Bay, N. Y., soon will become secretary of the navy, marking the first change in the Harding cabinet under the administration of President Coolidge, if present plans are carried out.

Edwin Denby of Michigan, at present secretary of the navy, has expressed a desire to retire. Young Roosevelt, now assistant secretary of the navy, is President Coolidge's own choice as Denby's successor.

To ascertain if the plan is acceptable to the New York state Republican organization, with which Roosevelt is closely identified, President Coolidge called into conference at the white house Senator James W. Wadsworth, Charles D. Hilles, New York Republican national committeeman; George K. Morris, New York Republican state chairman, and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt.

The plan carries with it the appointment of Secretary Denby to another post in keeping with the dignity and position of one who has occupied a cabinet portfolio. It is understood, however, that the selection of this new assignment has not been definitely determined.

It has been known for months that Secretary Denby has been desirous of retiring from the navy post to take up another line of service. The multiplicity of detail involved in the administration of the navy has made it an irksome task for him. Again he has felt a lack of co-operation and support in certain branches of the government that operated to handicap his plans for naval development. This is reflected in the attitude of the budget bureau, which has slashed by some $70,000,000 the navy's 1925 appropriation estimates, and in other instances.

Some months ago, before President Harding left Washington on his western trip, it was reported that Secretary Denby was desirous of giving up his cabinet place and that he was being considered for appointment as ambassador to Japan. The appointment of Cyrus E. Wood of Pennsylvania to the Japanese post precludes his receiving this place now, but some other diplomatic assignment may be found for him a little later.

It is doubtful if any assistant to a cabinet officer has had a more active part in the actual administration of a department as young Roosevelt has had with the navy. During the months that Secretary Denby was on his trip to Japan last year, and while he was absent from Washington for the naval maneuvers off Panama this year, Roosevelt was acting secretary.

HIT BY FROSTS

Supply of Seed Corn in Buckeye State May Be Scant.

Columbus, Sept. 22.—C. J. Willard, professor of farm crops at Ohio State university, issued a statement to the effect that early fall freezes that shivered ripening corn over a wide stretch of northern central Ohio, and touched it elsewhere here and there, carries threat of a seed corn situation that may bring on a repetition of the "seed corn famine" of 1917.

Professor Willard recommended immediate seed selection by farmers of the better-formed and more mature ears, this selection to be in the field from the standing stalk. "Maturity," he said, "is the first thing to be sought in seed corn any year, and this year mature ears are doubly worth looking for. They are the ones which have most nearly escaped frost and freeze. By selection from the standing stalk, one can judge the worth of the whole plant and its performance under different conditions of competition as well as the form, size, freedom from disease and maturity of the ears."

Woman Loses Life.

Cleveland, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Irene Cathcart, 28, of this city, was killed when an auto driven by Henry Goddoli plunged over a 30-foot embankment. Goddoli told police he escaped by jumping. He said the auto skidded on the wet pavement.

AROUND BATTLESHIPS

United States Navy Must Be Built, Says Naval Expert.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The United States navy must be built around the battleship rather than the airplane, Captain Luke McNamee, director of naval intelligence, maintained in an address delivered by radio. He spoke for "a navy that can stand up and take blows and hit back harder than the other fellow, a navy with battleships and airplanes. The way to win wars, he pointed out, "is to go after the other fellow and hit him where he lives."

Captain McNamee emphasized the view that the United States could not hope to win a war "by sitting at home on the defensive," even on the precarious assumption that airplanes might be able to protect American continental shores. It would be essential, he said, to bring "military pressure to bear against the enemy to compel him to accept peace or give up our possessions." If the United States had no navy but relied solely on a huge air fleet, according to Captain McNamee, an enemy could capture Panama, Porto Rico, Alaska, the Philippines, the Virginia Islands, Hawaii, Guam and Samoa, because he "would sink every transport that we sent out with reinforcements for any of these places." No defense, he asserted, can exist indefinitely if it can not be reinforced.

BERLIN OFFICIAL WORRIED

Settlement of Ruhr Problem May Mean Secession of Bavaria.

Berlin, Sept. 22.—The last 24 hours has brought no relief to the crisis in the German domestic political situation. The coalition parties remain firmly convinced that immediate settlement of the Ruhr question is vital, but they make no attempt to dissemble the fear that the immediate result will be the separation of Bavaria from the German republic.

It was learned from a reliable source that Minister of Defense Gessler, who has just returned from Bavaria, brought back very pessimistic reports of conditions there. On the other hand, General Ludendorff, in a Munich newspaper, says "There must be no thought of a separation of Bavaria from Germany."

The communists are steadily increasing their activity. Their plans obviously contemplate Saxony and Thuringia as the places for the gathering of the combined red forces in the event of Bavaria's defection from the German federation.

Publishers Accept Contract.

New York, Sept. 22.—Publishers of New York daily newspapers announced that they had accepted a contract presented by the board of directors of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' union. The publishers' announcement said: "The agreement announces the dissolution of the old local pressmen's union and the restoration of its charter. The international union enters directly into relations with the publishers. The working hours are reduced from 48 hours day and night to 41 hours night and 45 hours day, with a basic wage increase of $3 a week."

DRIVE CAR WITH EASE AND GRACE

Motors Show to Best Advantage Under Tutelage of the Good Form Driver.

(By ERWIN GREER, President of Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

When the ponies are clattering in on the home stretch, all other things being equal, it is the headiest rider that brings his mount first under the wire. Just as a Kentucky filly responds splendidly to the rein of a skilled driver, so does the thoroughbred of motors show its mettle to the best advantage under the tutelage of the "good form" driver.

Pleasure in Motoring.

Half the pleasure in motoring comes with learning to manipulate your car with consummate ease and grace. Correct form in driving means minimum strain on car mechanism and incidentally minimum drain on the pocket-book. Velvety stops and starts prevent unusual strains on the motor, clutch, transmission, axles and tires. They also cut down the consumption of gasoline and oil. A well-made motor, like a Swiss watch, is a sensitive thing. It resents abuse but responds willingly, capably to gentle handling.

Starting an automobile is an art. Simple though it may be, nevertheless there are hordes of drivers who never acquire it. The master driver aims to create a steady pull on the driving mechanism from the moment he slips into first speed until the car is under full headway. To wit, a homely formula for starting which may be taken after the entree of gear shifting:

Learn to Accelerate.

Learn to accelerate simultaneously with letting in the clutch. The mechanical act of gear shifting can be learned in five minutes.

As soon as you have the car in high speed, assume a natural, comfortable position. Avoid a strained, high-tension grip on the wheel. Driving a car is not tiresome if one sits in an easy upright position. The driver who slouches in his seat must be constantly shifting. He cannot apply the brakes without sitting erect. He must change his position to shift gear.

It is quite as essential to know how to stop the car quickly and smoothly as it is to know how to start it. The operation of braking is one of the most important in driving.

Worshiped at Shrine of Speed.

The highways are strewn with the wrecks of cars whose drivers worshiped at the shrine of speed. When the crisis comes the green driver is apt to forget the counsels of his glib instructor and another accident is chalked to the toll of "I didn't know." If you must test the spirit of your car, wait until you are perfectly sure of your ability to drive, until you would be willing to be the man in the tonneau.

You have heard many an enthusiastic owner boast that his car could take such and such a hill on "high." Doubtless it will, but at the same time he is putting an unnecessary strain upon his motor when he forces such a performance. The intermediate speed is placed on the car to use. It is a mistake to allow the motor to labor.

Good Accident Preventive.

Second speed is a good accident preventive when threading the maze of city traffic. The car is easily held under leash and may be stopped gently without jamming the brakes.

Only an amateur will allow his motor to race unnecessarily. Motor racing consumes gasoline in appalling drafts, and is also hard on the engine. After you have learned the A, B, C's of car manipulation, adopt the accelerator instead of the throttle-lever on the steering wheel.

When you come to a stop in traffic, don't forget the man behind. The hand held up in warning may save a rear-end collision. Show your intention of swerving off into a side street by holding out your arm horizontally. These signs have become accepted among motorists as a universal sign language. It's these little courtesies that help to make motoring a pleasure.

AUTOMOBILE MIGHTY HANDY FOR FARMERS

Faster Than Any Other Means of Transportation.

A writer, in discussing the relation of the automobile on the farm, says that after a hard day's work it is a pleasure to get into a car and take a 25-mile spin. We rest as we do, and study the methods of our neighbors.

Moreover, the automobile has another service to perform. It can bring more rapidly than your best horse "first aid to the injured." If there is an accident to a child or man, and a doctor or a surgeon is needed in a hurry, the automobile can bring him faster than any other means of transportation.

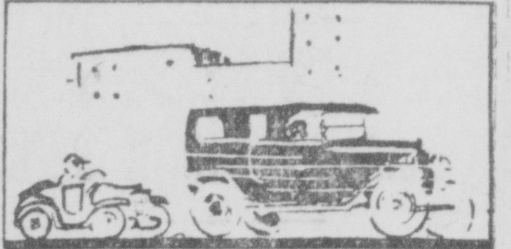

If there is trouble in the field, if some part of your farm machinery is broken down, the automobile can bring from town the needed help or the parts that you need to set the machine in motion again.

Again, the automobile brings the farmer closer to the market, whether it is the local or the distant market, and enables him to market his produce more rapidly and on better terms. The writer to whom we have referred says that he has a machine that has run for 16 months on the original set of tires, with only $3.25 expense for patching tubes. He says the purpose of his machine is pleasure, business and marketing; that he has hauled apples, potatoes, oats, eggs, butter, pigs, calves and hitched it to the hay rope to unload hay into the mow.

AVOID TRAILING IN TRAFFIC

No Use Running Risk of Bumping Into Expensive Cars on Congested City Streets.

Here is a hint for the man who drives through congested city streets: Don't trail behind expensive cars. The best of drivers find themselves ramming into the rears of other cars or clipping off rear fenders. It's inevitable in traffic such as we know it today.

But there is no use running the risk of bumping a $10,000-gold-plated-palace-on-wheels when there are thousands of dilapidated buses to stick behind.

The owner or driver of an expensive car is much more likely to raise a rumpus if you hit his property because a slight scratch looks like the dickens. Some drivers of flivvers, or near-flivvers, are likely to mistake a bump for pep in the motor.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

A motorist who "slips" his clutch, scorches and hardens the leather on the cone.

When planning a trip of any length, it is a wise motorist that inventories his car and its equipment.

At the same time that you grind in the valves, clean the stems of all foreign matter and make them bright and shiny.

Always be careful to attach the rope to some part of the frame and not to the axle whenever it is necessary for a car to tow another.

A small bottle of shellac should always be carried in the car as it is invaluable for many purposes in an emergency. Gasoline will not dissolve shellac.

When the starting motor for any reason lacks power to turn over the crankshaft it may be strengthened by coupling on another storage battery, connecting it in multiple so as not to increase the voltage.

Limitation of Planes.

Limitation of air armament through an international conference is proposed in an editorial in the current issue of the American Legion Weekly. The sea-power question has been settled through the Washington conference and the land-power problem has been settled theoretically by the reduction of armies, but the air-power question has not been touched. It is pointed out. Delay in calling the conference complicates the situation and increases the dangers, the Legion publication says.

Black in Evidence for Fall Dresses

Darker Materials Take an Early Lead in Modes for New Season.

Black frocks predominate in the early fall exhibits, with navy blue as the only close competitor, notes a fashion writer in the Washington Star. Fabrics are unusually interesting, though, and they more than make up for the lack of variety in color tones. Several new satins have made their appearance—soft clinging, crepe-like silks that lend themselves admirably to drapery and pebbly-surfaced satins that are effective in plainer models, with little or no trimming.

Eccu lace is a favored medium for collars and cuffs, while beige georgette and eyelet-embroidered organdie are also popular. Some frocks, fashioned on simple, straight lines, combine two of them. For instance, one attractive model seen was of pebbly black satin, with the bateau neck bordered by a rolled-over collar of openwork beige organdie frilled with several tiers of narrow self-color lace. Gauntlet cuffs of organdie, also edged with lace fluting, added the only other touch of trimming.

One street frock was of navy blue Poiret twill, cut on rather severe tailored lines, and yet trimmed with soft lace frills, which contradicted the tailored effect. It was fashioned in one straight piece, with a rounded neck bordered by a pointed collar and long sleeves molded to fit the wrists like gloves. A jabot of shirred eccu lace drooped from the collar fastening, while lace ruffles bordered the sleeves, half-veiling the hands, and extended in straight lines up the side of each sleeve, nearly touching the elbows. Green braid, stitched in silver and outlined on one side with a narrow thread of gold braid and on the other with red, outlined both collar and sleeve ends, and also framed the lace frills at the side of each sleeve. Additional strips of the three-tone braid were applique over each hip in a conventional pattern and extended the length of the skirt at each side, forming pseudo-panels. Three long tassels of dark blue silk dangled from the braid outlines on the hips, adding the finishing touches to the model.

Hand Knit Frocks Are Chic for Sports Wear

Hand-knit sports frocks for madame and mademoiselle are among the smart knitted garments worn by women who dress well. But if a woman can wield a knitting needle, she can have the same frock at much less cost.

Some of the frocks are made in one piece, with low V-neck and plain stocking stitch for three-quarters of the way, and in squares or plaids, as you will, of the knit and purl combination. The skirt ends with a plain hem effect in the stocking stitch. Others are two-piece. Yellow, tan, beige, powder blue, green and white, in one tone or with another color combined, are used for these frocks.

The softest yarns should be used. Some of the frocks are embroidered in Angora or brush wool, and still others are trimmed with worsted yarn flowers or conventional designs which are applique on.

Metallic Fabrics Reign Supreme.

A most outstanding thing in the interesting fashions for fall is the undeniable supremacy of metallic fabrics and effects. Entire gowns of richly embroidered cloth of gold are not restricted to the slim draped lines known in the past, but are shown in almost bouffant style in several instances.

Smart New Fall Coat, Black and White Wool

Perhaps one of the smartest coats for the fall season is this imported model of white and black wool, colored with silver fox.

Interesting Notes of Fashions in Apparel

The unexpected in color, detail and fabric gives much of charm to the numbers shown, which include a majority of formal and semiformal gowns.

The newer coats and capes of today have the most demure of linings. Wood-browns, deep grays, blues and unobtrusive greens are in order instead of the gay linings formerly seen. Cyclamen pink and silver is one of the smart color combinations just now. A cape of silk crepe in cyclamen is lightly embroidered in silver thread and trimmed with bands of silver fox.

Summer ermine or brown lace is very effective. This gown in semibouffant style shows the lace over a gold underbody and galls a rich appearance by a ribbon sash of henna and purple, which ties in front.

Embroidered orange mousseline de soie is the usual trimming note on a brown velvet afternoon gown. This makes a deep edge on V-shaped neck and forms the flowing sleeves that drop from the elbow.

Another afternoon gown of almond-green bands its skirt with squares of gold metal cloth edged in lace and piped with green in almost indiscernible width. This number ties at one side with a generous sash.

The shoes for late summer and early fall wear grow more and more elaborate. Evening shoes today have "log-cabin" designs—gray suede, much cut out over a black satin underlay, or field-mouse patent leather over satin in a beige tone. Even the high heels are similarly striped.

One of the Lanvin models is developed in a petrole blue taffeta. The bodice, made with a square neck, is long and semifitted, and the skirt is composed of three deep ruffles whose fullness is accented by hooped support. Applique taffeta roses in natural color eased onto the fabric with silk stitching are its only trimming.

Mode Variety Permits Individuality Display

Gone, and almost forgotten, for the time at least, is that sweet simplicity in dress poets once extolled.

Even the little dance frocks, flounced and frilled, girlish at first glance, at second glance disclose among their innocent looking folds rhinestones enough to weight a court train. Bugles, beads, embroideries, striking contrasts in color and in material, ornamentation of all sorts, is the order of the new day. In these effects fur plays an important part, with Russian suggestion, and lace adds many a Spanish touch to an American product.

Happily, there is variety. All figures may be suited. All types of women are in a fair way to be pleased, and certainly the task of pleasing is made easier for the salesperson. The straight tubelike silhouette is retained. The bouffant skirt remains in the picture. The circular flare that starts at the hip has taken on new impetus by way of inserted godets. Most important of all because most radically different, is the new silhouette that starts out to be tubelike and then suddenly at or below the knee flares out by means of a circular or plaited flounce. In these four distinct figure outlines, we have more opportunity for individual expression than in many a season past.

Moire for the Mature Gown.

Moire in both subdued and bright tones is recognized as a suitable material for the mature evening gown. In the models shown in this material, the swathed silhouette and several instances of the back drape are noted. Chiffon is presented as an ideal material for bouffant evening dresses and when these delicately colored and daintly developed numbers are not trimmed with many rows of lace, rhinestone studs are selected as a garniture.

Retains Narrow Hemline.

A gown that satisfies the present fad for plaited flounces and yet retains a narrow hemline has the two flounces arranged tunic fashion over a right underskirt which shows just a few inches.

BUOYS ALL HAVE A MEANING

About Forty Different Types Used to Guide and Warn Ships.

When you are at the seaside strolling on the beach and look out to sea. You will, no doubt, notice a number of buoys bobbing up and down in the water. In all there are about 40 different types, and to the ordinary person they all seem to mean the same, but if you get hold of an "old salt" and ask him for their meanings, you will be surprised with the host of interesting information he will give you.

He will tell you that a green-painted buoy marks a wreck. A deep-water channel is often marked by 70 or more buoys.

Perhaps one of the most uncanny sounds a person can wish to hear is the muffled tolling of a bell buoy on a wild night when the sea is very rough. Stand on the shore, or at the end of the pier, and you will hear it quite distinctly when the wind drops for a moment.

Then there is the gas bell buoy. Highly compressed gas is stored in the base of the buoy, and is forced up by pipes into a lantern. There are lenses that help to add brilliance to the light, which flashes out its warning day and night until all the gas is used. The usual time of refilling is about a fortnight.

There is also an anchor buoy which looks like a barrel on the water. It is filled with cork, and is anchored to the sandy bed of the sea. This buoy is intended to warn ships not to cast anchor in the vicinity, there being a cable laid near.—London Tit-Bits.

TIME OF WILDCAT BANKS

The term "wildcats," today applied to worthless securities of any description, was originally the name given to certain banks in Michigan. Back in 1837 there was a severe financial panic. Many banks failed. The currency which they had circulated became worthless, many bogus banks started up and issued "bank notes" and the country was overrun with a swarm of counterfeiters. Banking and business were demoralized and, to make matters worse, lax legislation was passed in many states, permitting almost any kind of financial robbery in the name of banking.

Such was the case in Michigan, where 40 banks were started under a law of fraudulent character. These banks were called "wildcats" because the bank notes issued by them bore a picture of that animal. All but four of these failed within two years, hence the term "wildcat" to denote a very insecure financial obligation.—Muncie Bank Bulletin.

Romance of Stolen Mail Bag.

The English post office department maintains an official of the nature of a historian whose duty is, among other things, to collect and record various data about the service. One of the most curious exhibits of the department is a time-worn oil-canvas mail bag—a reminiscence of a daring mail robbery. This bag is over 100 years old, and was forcibly taken by an armed footpad one evening in February, 1798, from the postboy who was carrying the mails between York and Selby. A reward was offered for the apprehension of the robber, but no trace of him or the mail bag was found until nearly eighty years later. The discovery then came about in a most singular manner. In 1876 an old wayside inn was being demolished at Churchill near Selby, and in the rafters the workmen found, among other things, the long-lost mail bag, it having evidently been hidden there by the highwayman of 1798, after being despoiled of its contents.

Dogs' Limitations.

An investigation is being made as to the truth of an Arab assertion that dogs cannot follow the trail of a naked person. A number of writers vouched for the correctness of the contention and proffered the results of their own experiences. One of the letters received was from a French officer who had spent many years among the Arabs. He says in his letter: "Once, when I found myself with a moving column in Morocco, a sentry of mine was stabbed no farther than 30 feet from my tent by three Arabs, who came in the night, entirely naked, wishing to steal a gun. Two very good watch dogs lay in my tent, but neither moved; and there were other dogs in the camp, but all were perfectly still as the Arabs came and went." The writer of the letter argues that this fact proves the point, but adds that Arabs themselves declare they are unable to explain it.

Curious Changes in Eyes of Fish.

A study of the different forms and habits of fishes will bring most interesting things to light. An instance: One of the most peculiar things about flounders is that the young of the species swim upright as in the case of all adults of any ordinary species. The eyes of young flounders are like those of any ordinary fish, one being situated on each side of the head. Gradually, however, a change comes in the appearance of the young flounder. As it grows one of the eyes travels around to the side of the head until both are on the same side. Subsequently this side becomes the upper side of the head. Most of this rotation of the eye is a rapid process, taking no more than three days.

China Clay.

China clay is nothing but decayed granite and much of it is dug up from pits in Cornwall, England. It is mixed with water and run into a series of ponds, where the heavy impurities sink to the bottom, leaving a thin paste of fine clay. When this settles it is dried into bricks, ready to go to the potteries.

MOTHER

Who Made Greatest Sacrifice is Sought by American Legion.

General Chauncey B. Baker, the new commander of the American Legion of Ohio, has issued the following letter and it is hoped that all will take heed to the subject of which he speaks and that everyone will co-operate to the end that the Ohio mother who has made the greatest sacrifice may receive proper recognition.

The letter sent out is as follows:

"The state of Ohio will pay the expense to the National Convention of the American War Mothers in Kansas City, Missouri, from September 29 to October 5, of the Ohio mother who sent the greatest number into the service in the late war and out of that number lost the most.

"The government of Ohio has asked the American Legion of Ohio to name the Ohio mother who made this greatest sacrifice. Accordingly, you are urged to take immediate steps to determine the mother in your community who, in your opinion, made the greatest sacrifice and write us immediately setting forth the details of her sacrifice together with her name and address.

"It is necessary that your nomination of the mother for this honor be in department headquarters not later than September 25th, next Tuesday. Please give this matter your immediate attention and report at once so that no one who merits the honor will be overlooked. Get immediate publicity in your local newspapers so that your entire community will know that you are making such a selection and so that the public of your community may feel free to call your attention to any mother of your community who would be eligible to such an honor. Be sure to get all available information regarding your nominee into our hands not later than next Tuesday.

"IT IS VERY IMPORTANT THAT A THORO ENDEAVOR BE MADE IN EVERY COMMUNITY OF THE STATE ON THIS MATTER SO THAT NO MISTAKE WILL BE MADE. PLEASE LET US HAVE YOUR IMMEDIATE COOPERATION."

Papyrus Sails For America. London, Sept. 22.—With the cheers of big crowd ringing in his ears, the mayor of Southampton presented his wishes of good luck to the great derby winner, Papyrus, and his stable mate, Bar Gold, when they boarded the Cunarder Aquitania, to sail for New York to meet America's best three-year-old at Belmont park on Oct. 20.

To Succeed Father Hickey. Cincinnati, Sept. 22.—Archbishop Henry Moeller has appointed the Rev. William A. Casey, new pastor of St. Charles Borromeo Catholic church, South Charleston, O., to succeed the Rev. George F. Hickey to the pastorate of St. Mary's church, Urbana. The Rev. James E. Quinn, who has been on sick leave, is made pastor at South Charleston.

Donahay For One Auto Tax. Cleveland, Sept. 22.—Governor Donahay pledged himself to fight for enactment of a law providing for only one tax for autos; this to cover all expenses now taken care of through several different taxes. He addressed 300 delegates to the National Motorists' association conference here. In discussing gasoline prices, the governor said there should be a lower rate.

Levee Quickly Constructed. Only seven weeks were required to throw up 240,000 cubic yards of dirt in building an emergency levee on the Mississippi river.

Director Baker Seriously Ill.

Columbus, Sept. 22.—W. E. Baker, state finance director, is seriously ill with pneumonia at Presque Isle, Mich., according to word received at the governor's office. Baker, accompanied by his wife and son, Edgar, left for Michigan two weeks ago on a vacation fishing trip. He became ill shortly after arriving there. Attending physicians state his condition is too serious to permit him to be moved.

HARTMAN THEATER

Here is an opportunity not to be overlooked. George M. Cohan, the "Yankee Doodle Boy" author and producer of more great successes than any one genius of the theater in the world has a brand new one that is to be presented at the Hartman theater in Columbus the week of Monday, September 24.

His new production, which is to be seen in Columbus before sophisticated Broadway gets a glimpse of it, is "The Song and Dance Man" and George M. Cohan wrote it especially for his new star, Lynne Overman. It is safe to say that George has "put another winner across the plate" and Hartman patrons are among the very first to see it.

It is said that Cohan had the idea suggested by the title in mind for some time and originally expected to play in it himself, but decided that Lynne Overman could better carry the character. Before he wrote a line of the script he engaged his full cast of players to support Overman with the result that each part is particularly adapted to the individual player engaged.

Much can be expected, therefore, from such sterling people as Overman, Frederick Perry, Will Deming, Louis Calhern, Robert Cummings, Eleanor Woodruff, Maye Methot, Laura Bennett and others.

The story of "The Song and Dance Man" is said to be unique in its style and plot. Mr. Cohan characterizes it as "an American comedy, but in keeping with this usual Cohan policy the doughty little producer does not wish to divulge the nature of the plot preferring to spring a complete surprise on his friends and admirers.

Mail orders should be sent to the Hartman boxoffice at once as the demand for reservations promises to be heavy. A Cohan offering is always an event of much note and in view of the fact that Columbus is to see it first even before the New York premiere the interest therein is of double intensity.

The engagement is for an entire week with the usual matinees.

The loss on household goods and property will be about $10,000.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"He's been everywhere." The Detective was enthusiastic. "He joined the army and served a couple of tricks; then he went into the navy and around the world. It is wonderful to listen to him talk. He was 30 when he put on civilian clothes and he joined at 17."

"I can't get het up about it, Kelly," replied the Hotel Stenographer. "Those guys who use a suitcase for a permanent home and general delivery as a regular address, never appealed to me as sweeties. Some of the best-traveled men in the world dry dishes in their wives' boarding houses."

"The chap who starts to see the world first settles down afterwards never has much to settle down to when settling time comes."

"The fellow who makes his pile first and does his traveling afterwards is the most worth while, even if he does no more traveling than the other fellow does settling."

"Nix on the travelers, Kelly."

It took seventy-two hours to film a single scene in "The White Flower" Betty Compson's latest Paramount picture, which will be the feature at the Met theater next Monday. For three days and nights the camera remained in position for one single scene—a "shot" of a night-blooming cereus in blossom.

This flower—a gorgeous white blossom found in Hawaii—blooms but once and then at midnight. The bud remains open for only a short time and the flower dies immediately after it has blossomed.

James Van Trees, the cameraman, selected a promising bud and placed his camera in position. Lights were placed so that enough illumination to photograph would be available at a moments notice. And then it was necessary to sit down and wait until the blossoms opened.

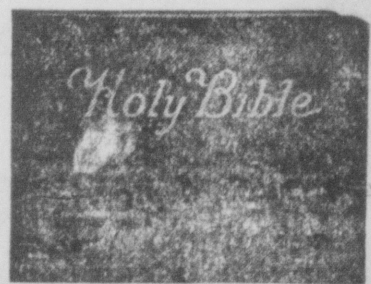

Just before dawn of the third night, the vigil the cereus blossomed and the record of it was secured.

Because of the title of this Paramount picture and the symbolism of the night blooming cereus it was deemed necessary to go to this tremendous expenditure of time for one small scene.

"The White Flower" was filmed in Hawaii under the direction of Mrs. Julia Crawford Ivers, who wrote the story of the photoplay during a recent visit to the islands. Miss Compson plays the role of a half caste girl and is supported by a cast which includes Edmund Lowe, Arline Pretty, Leon Barry, Sylvia Ashton, Edward Martindel and Arthur Hoyt. There are many thrilling moments in the development of the story.

AT THE COURT HOUSE

The National Power Machinery company, of Cleveland, has filed a civil action against the Soyco Mills company, in which they ask to have a receiver appointed on a claim due them to the amount of $300 with interest from May 22, 1923. Powell & Powell, of Columbus, represent the plaintiffs.

The trouble it seems arises over the fact that the defendants purchased a dynamo of the plaintiffs and which the latter claims has not been paid, the accounts being now overdue.

The plaintiffs make sensational charges attacking the credit of the defendants, claiming that on June 11, 1923 and agreement was made between the defendant company and the Corporation Underwriters Syndicate, that the latter would take over the defendant company and that the Syndicate would take over all the bills and indebtedness of defendant company which would be paid by the Corporation Underwriter Syndicate in accordance with certain options and agreements and they allege that the contract was not carried to completion for the reason that the statement of indebtedness made by the defendant was not true.

The property held by the defendant company, it is alleged is worth less than $25,000 and their outstanding and valid indebtedness amounts to approximately $50,000 which they are unable to pay.

They also claim that the Soyco Mills company has no one in charge of their interests and that their assets are being lost and dissipated and that the property was taken over by the Crites-Heffner Mills company, which is operating the mills.

How Tuilleries Got Name.

The famous palace of the Tuilleries in Paris received its name from the tile yards on whose site it was built. These tile yards were of ancient date, mention being made of them as early as the Thirteenth century. Later they were abandoned and a house was built over them. In 1564 Catherine de Medici began the erection of a royal palace. It was seized by the revolutionists in 1792, in 1830 and in 1848. It was finally burned in 1871 and its ruins were undisturbed until 1883. All that remains of it now are two pavilions, which are joined to two arms of the Louvre. The site of the palace is now occupied by the Tuilleries Garden, a popular promenade.

Shrine in the Garage.

People used to have large open fire places, and they cooked everything at them and sat about them when they had finished eating. A later period glorified, as the center of home life, the kitchen range, the starting place of all good pie. Now people have steam heat and go to the delicatessen store. The Lares and Penates haven't died. They are immortal. They have only moved out into the little garage with the galvanized tin roof, and people are worshipping them now just as much, lying on their backs tightening the chassis nuts, as when they were gazing at dying embers.—From the New Republic.

COPYING THE BANE OF ART

Critic Believes That Americans Neglect Real Artistic Beauty for European.

Copying is still carried so far that ornament is copied all the time instead of being created, says Allen Tucker, in the North American Review, and I am told that in offices the draftsman must show his original for everything he does. Out of such a system artists do not come.

It is generally Europe that is copied. I know we came from Europe, are Europeans, but we have ourselves by now, an accomplishment of our own, and until recently, when there is a rather senseless copying of the external or colonial stuff, we never cast our eyes on our own things. The buildings of value we had we have been careless of. Think of dumping that post office where it ruins the appearance of our lovely city hall! Think of the savage and senseless destruction of St. John's chapel of Trinity parish, with its unrivaled spire!

We copy the old things. We do not seek to develop the artistic spirit that made nearly everything it touched a thing of delight and beauty. I think it was Mr. Lay who first pointed out what so few realize, that the New England town is the only town anywhere originally built on a plan, the only town made with a design, the only town with a feeling for form instinct in its very bones.

We rave about Italian villages and never see the quality of our native towns. I don't believe in the American eagle screaming, but there is no reason why he should spend his time sitting on foreign eggs in the attempt to hatch out what are always foreign birds, while so often the eggs have proved to be nothing but china somewhat devoid of life.

This song has literally sung its way around the world, touching high and low, inspiring deeds of heroism on the battle field as well as deeds of patient goodness in the most obscure corners. It was a woman who wrote the poem and she never, in her wildest dreams imagined that it would become the lever by which hundreds of thousands of lives would be moved. It came to her out of the fullness of a heart in which the love of God blazed and of what she considered to be the dim little corner of life in which she found herself confined.

She had had many ambitions. She had wanted to be a writer. She had had dreams of doing good in the world in a large, wonderful way. Hers was a consecrated heart and mind, eager for the Lord's service. Later, as her soul developed she wished to carry the Gospel of Christ to foreign lands or to help in uplifting the poor and forlorn in the dark places of our great cities. Despite her longings and her steady application of her talents and her prayers that a way might open to her she was relentlessly refused what she most desired.

Her husband was a railway mail clerk and was often absent from home but the time which might otherwise have been occupied in her literary work was taken up by the care of her small boy and her father who was an invalid. It seemed as tho she must put her ambitions for the development of her talents out of her life—as tho it were impossible ever for her to reach into a broader sphere.

No one knows except the person who yearns to write great and beautiful thoughts, what may some day electrify the world, what a heartache and soul wrench it is to have abandon those ambitions.

It almost broke down her cheery spirit. Not because she could not find comfort in knowing that she was doing all that she could, but because her spirit ceaselessly fretted for the doing of larger things. It seemed to her that what she actually did was so very, very little.

One day, however, a mother of the neighborhood—poor and hard worked too—told her that the hours which she passed in her quiet home were the bright spots in her life. That set her to thinking.

Up to that time she had interested herself of course, in others, but she had done it conscientiously, not enthusiastically. She wondered if any spark from the hours spent with her would illuminate other lives in the after years.

She set herself to becoming an inspiration to those about her. She tried to throw the light of her own vision upon them. She remembered that she might sow in their hearts the seeds of the love of God. It was an outlet, a little outlet, for the zeal which was in her.

She set herself resolutely to do all that she possibly could in the little corner of the world, where, it seemed, God chose to keep her. Nothing in her life was, apparently, changed by her new feeling. Nothing but herself. Within her now, she began to feel a well of happiness. She lost the sense of being shut away from the world. She forgot that the domestic duties with which she was ceaselessly occupied were little, trivial things. She saw that certain tasks were given her to do, and that the iron barriers, which hemmed her in from what she had wanted to do, were also the restraining bonds which outlined the sphere of her work and life.

The history of the song from that date is a matter of gospel history. In the past ten years that song has been published more often than any other gospel song.

One of the stories of this song has to do with a man so far away from its author, that under any other conditions it is almost impossible that their lives should have had any contact. He is the head of a national business. He is a big man in the world of finance, not only in this country, but in others. Until recently he was just a splendid thinking machine. People were afraid of him. His employees, even men high in his confidence, found it difficult to talk to him. Those in subordinate positions trembled when he looked their way, for he never did so unless he had found a flaw in their work.

He was the kind of a man who has been described in fiction but whom you do not often see—a man of iron and steel. So far as having emotion, or an unselfish interest in humanity, he might as well have been a clever piece of mechanism.

even in his home city to which he never gave a thought.

The puncture was a bad one and he grew a little bored. The thousands and thousands who kept pouring into the tabernacle riveted his attention, despite his struggle not to be interested. He began to wonder what the building was and what was going on inside. Then his chauffeur reported that he would have to put on an emergency tire.

The chauffeur finished his work and looked inside the car for his employer, but he was not there.

A boy, who was standing near, told him that the other had gone into the tabernacle. The chauffeur was so surprised that he nearly fainted, for he had never known his employer to attend any meeting but a board meeting of financiers.

Among those who "hit the trail" that night was the man of iron and steel. He sat down in his turn to wait for us to write down his name, his address and his church preferences, as we always do, and to one of the workers who approached him for that purpose he gave something of his remarkable story.

Some converts seem dazed by the experience thru which they have just gone and some are so happy that they cannot help crying, but the man of iron and steel was simply more efficient, more composed and more keen than usual. He had already analyzed his own change of heart and wanted to tell about it.

"I don't suppose a man like you can realize how I could have become so cold and indifferent to everyone and everything in the world as I have become," he said. "I began my business life when I was a very young man. All I thought about was money. I saw that many men failed to get money because they stopped for other things and I determined that I would so train my mind that it would not recognize the existence of anything else but money. I succeeded. I taught myself to look on those around me as so many shadows out of which I could extract what I wanted.

"I have not married, and so family life did not have an opportunity to soften me. I don't think I ever loved a person in my life, certainly not since I was a man. I have never given a thought to friendship in my life. I never read books that dealt with sentiment, I never read anything in the newspapers but the financial reports, I care nothing for music or the arts.

"When I came here tonight I did not even know what was going on. I had to wait outside while my chauffeur put on a new tire and I was bored. "I listened tonight for the first time to men talking about the things I have always refused to consider—God and humanity. Then there came that song, 'Brighten the Corner' and in its simple melody and message heard something that finished my decision. I am going to begin the job of brightening my corner on business lines."

The degree and extent to which he kept his word is common talk in his home city and state. He is a man now to whom his associates go for help when they are in tight places. He has given royally to every humanitarian cause which has come to his notice. He is a power now in that church of which he was a merely nominal member for so many years. And in his office, among his associates and his employees, he is the friend, the adviser, the sympathetic, ever-ready listener, who is all but adored by those who know him.

Once, as one of my friends was getting my collars from a Chinese laundry a few blocks from the tabernacle, he heard a queer, falsetto voice singing words which sounded vaguely familiar.

"Brighten the colna wel you al" was what reached his ears.

The proprietor, a very bright, well educated Chinese, called the singer from the tubs and in his odd, clipped speech, he began to tell him another story of the results of that marvelous little song.

He was a "Christian" now, he said. He had hit the "trail," as he called it. He did not know, very well, how to sing "Melican" fashion, but he loved that "Brighten the Colna" song. Chang today, has established one of the most unique Christian enterprises in the country. He has formed a little school over a stable where he holds meetings for the members of his own race. He has interested several women of the neighborhood in his work, who teach English classes twice a week. One of them is a vocal instructor who is laboring with the difficulties of training the Chinese throat into a normal pitch, instead of the high falsetto, natural to the race.

She writes that Chang is really inspired. He has even brought to conversion several American customers of the laundry, where he is still employed. He has succeeded in Christianizing his employer, one of the most inscrutable and suave of Chinamen, all the harder to touch because of his many sided mental development, for he is an accomplished Confucian scholar and can argue on any religion, or about any form of philosophy.

Chang loves to sing and it is the grief of his life that he has never succeeded in acquiring that gift. Also, it has been impossible, so far, for him to master English. He still "Brightens" his corners and otherwise allows the letter "r" to elude him, but in earnestness of his missionary spirit he overcomes these obstacles.

It is only recently that his American associates learned that his first effort at brightening his corner was to conquer his own habit of taking opium. What he must have suffered in his solitary task of self-reformation, no one can imagine, unless they know something of the fearful toll which that drug exacts from those who seek to release themselves from its blight.

Usually, the services of a doctor and nurses and special treatment are necessary as well as the most earnest efforts of the subject, himself. Yet Chang accomplished it alone.

And sometimes in his meetings over the stable, he tells of his experience. He says that when he was so racked and torn by his fight that he thought he would surely die, he tried to sing, and he sang over and over the song which had first made him realize the beginning of his upward way was to remove the darkness which had for so long shrouded his soul.

This is a far, far cry from the author of the little song—in her quiet home, following her domestic duties, and thinking that the scope of her influence must always be confined within four walls, isn't it?

God's message knows no limits of space, or society, or race, or creed.

Aldrich's Critic.

"As time went on," says Ferris Greenslet of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, "he was growing increasingly fastidious in the revision of his prose, and in the end he smoothed and filed it with the same loving, lingering care that he bestowed upon his poems. As he wrote in one of his letters: 'There is only one critic I stand greatly in dread of; he becomes keener and more exacting every month; he is getting to be a dreadful fellow for me, and his name is T. B. Aldrich. There is no let up.'"

Obtaining Feed Economically Is Most Troublesome Problem of Breeders.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Producing or otherwise obtaining their feed economically is the most troublesome feeding problem of farmers who keep live stock. This was brought out emphatically through a questionnaire sent out by the United States Department of Agriculture which was answered by nearly 500 farmers scattered over the country. The replies showed that general economy of rations, the cost of grain, and the cost of protein represent about 52 per cent of the difficulties in feeding. These men classed balancing of rations next in importance. Other problems, such as labor, increasing production, difficulties in wintering stock, short pastures, and variety and palatability of feeds apparently were thought of only in connection with the principal difficulties. That these opinions are worth considering is borne out by the fact that all of the men questioned were progressive farmers and breeders, and the average period of their experience was 20 years.

Adopt Balanced Rations.

During the two decades these stock raisers have been working to get ahead, many changes have taken place in the ways of feeding animals. The outstanding progressive step taken has been the wide adopting of the balanced ration. Other improvements in the order given by most of the five hundred farmers are more liberal feeding, feeding more legumes, better water supply, providing minerals, feeding according to production, feeding more protein, and more regular feeding. At the same time they list the common errors in feeding which are responsible for poor results, poor combinations of feeds being the one most frequently mentioned, followed by underfeeding as the next most effective reducer of profits. Following these in regular order, based on the number of times mentioned in the answers, come lack of protein, lack of water, lack of legumes, sudden changes of feed, poor housing parasites, lack of salt, waste of feed, poor equipment, and overfeeding. Practically all of these troubles are easily preventable.

Almost all of these 500 farmers had raised at one time or another scrubs, grades, and pure breeds, and almost to a man they joined in a paean of praise of the pure bred. Only 1 per cent of them reported that they had failed with improved stock. Most replies contained specific estimates showing the superiority of well-bred over random-bred animals, and when averaged it was brought out that these men consider that pure breeds make about 40 per cent better returns on feed used than common stock. It is interesting to note here that another questionnaire sent out by the department a year ago and answered by several hundred farmers showed that in their opinion pure breeds have a general utility value a little more than 40 per cent greater than common stock.

Many Use Self-Feeders.

The report prepared by the department on the results of this feeding investigation contains many more interesting sidelights on feeding and corroborates a number of tendencies that good observers must have suspected. For instance, of 400 who answered questions regarding the use of self-feeders, 41.5 per cent had used this method of feeding, leaving about three-fifths yet to take up this economy. At present the self-feeder seems to be used mostly in hog raising districts and for poultry. In the Middle West more than half the farmers reporting used it. The general sentiment seems to be that this piece of equipment is especially suited to hogs and chickens, but a few farmers used it for feeding calves and sheep.

Nearly all of those who replied made comment on the feeding of silage, and practically 50 per cent of them use this feed. In the north-eastern states, where dairying is very generally followed, two-thirds of the farmers in the list have silos. Although most of the silage is fed to dairy cows, the list of animals to which it is fed, according to the questionnaire, includes also steers, breeding ewes, and brood sows. A few men reported feeding it in limited quantities to horses, hogs, and lambs. It is worth while to note that more than 22 per cent of these farmers who answered the government questions credited farm papers as the principal source of their knowledge of feeding problems. Other important sources mentioned were: Experience on home farm, general observation, bulletins, and books and records.

Darken Colt's Stall to Lessen Fly Irritation

Leave the colts in the barn while their mother is working in the field. Darken the colts' stalls to lessen the irritation from flies and give them access to clean feed at all times. This will give them a chance to develop and grow into much better individuals.

Profitable to Cull Flocks.

It is just as profitable to keep the farm flock culled for wool and mutton as for eggs and white meat.

Don't Go Run Down
at the Heel

If your heels are all run down,
You must never scold nor fret,
For worrying and scolding
Has accomplished nothing yet.

If your sole is off and gone,
Or contains an ugly hole;
By sighing or repining
You will never win the goal.

If you'll listen just one moment
I will tell you what to do,
Tell you how to rid your troubles.

Walk Tells the Character.
A woman's character can be told by her walk. A martial tread indicates the soldierly type of woman. An energetic spirit, lively tongue and short temper are indicated by quick steps. The fast walker is usually a bustling, busy person, a good housekeeper and one who abhors dirt and dust. No tradesman would ever cheat her, remarks London Tit-Bits. A soft, timid tread is the step of the clinging, gentle woman, who relies entirely upon her husband. She will be essentially "feminine" and dainty. Turned-in toes indicate a preoccupied, absent-minded person. Calmness and reflection are betokened by slow steps, either long or short. A proud and haughty nature is found where the step is measured and slow, with the toes well turned out.

CONTENTED HEART

OLD JARED kept his little shop on the village street. Every day he sat cheerfully behind the crude counter handing out needles and thread and magazines and candies. At evening there was the excitement and neighborly visiting of customers coming for their city papers.

Behind the shop in two or three neat rooms Jared kept house, the black cat his purring companion.

Jared was bent, and wrinkled, and kindly. This same village had been his home since boyhood. His wife had died many years ago, and his only sister married a man who had gone on rapidly to success.

Both the sister and her husband, who lived in an adjoining city, were gone now, leaving two daughters. One, Elizabeth, married and prosperous; the other, Janey, Jared recalled as "the little one."

The two young nieces were now away at boarding school, and Janey found more time to herself. "Why," she asked, looking up from Uncle Jared's last letter, "do we never go to see Uncle Jared? He was mother's own brother."

"Why," returned Elizabeth, "should we? A queer old hermit. I shall never forget his appearance at mother's funeral."

"Poor mother," sighed Janey, "she knew sorrow indeed when father lost his money in investment."

"Well," Elizabeth dryly returned, "I guess father suffered, too, even though he was not dependent for happiness on the things money can buy. Worry over mother's disappointment shortened his days, I think. My, what a cheerful topic we've started. I'm off for the Richmond's tea."

It was strange, as one could reach Uncle Jared's village in an hour or two.

When her sister had driven away Janey slipped into her suit coat, picked up her purse and went for the trolley. She entered Uncle Jared's little shop in the late afternoon.

"Why, how do you do?" he faltered; "can this really be the little one?"

Janey smiled. "I used to be little, Uncle Jared; I'm Janey. I have come to visit you for a while, if I may."

His trembling hand closed over her warm one, his keen, kindly eyes searching her sweet young face.

"You are like your father," said Uncle Jared. "Sometimes he used to drop over to spend a night with me, though I don't know as any one ever knew it. A fine man, your father, my dear."

Next morning Janey presented herself in her sister's home, happy excitement in the flush of her cheeks.

"I'm going to live with Uncle Jared," she announced. "I love it there, among the hills. I shall wait on the shop, and prepare his meals in the pretty room. We need each other; Uncle Jared and I are alone."

"To think!" said the old man when she returned to him, "that the Lord more than answered my prayer. I prayed even if it may not be kin, Oh Lord, send, please, some friendly soul, that I may not end my days alone. And He sent kin, indeed."

Janey's soft cheek was against the wrinkled one. "The nearest of kin," she told him.

Elizabeth's husband said that they must have her back, when the girls came home from school. He missed the restfulness of Janey's presence in his wife's hurried living, the helpfulness of little tasks that Janey had never been too hurried to accomplish.

Uncle Jared went to sleep one morning. Janey could not grieve for him; it was such a peaceful sleep, and his last days had been so full of content. He left the little shop to Janey, and when Elizabeth learned that her sister intended to continue on there as old Jared had done, she lifted her shoulders not comprehending.

Janey was allowed no hour of loneliness by friendly village folk, who said their good nights as she put out the lights, and greeted her with the opening of the door each morning. Uncle Jared's old friends still came at evening to talk with her about him, and the children had parties in the rooms behind the little shop.

Then one day came a pleasant, distinguished stranger to bargain for the land on which the shop stood.

"We are running the trolley through here," the young man explained, "and your uncle held off for the biggest price. He wanted you to receive the benefit."

Janey thought the price named was very big, indeed, and she told him so. "The land is worth all that to us," he said.

Advised by the village lawyer, Janey made the sale.

The agent of transaction stayed at the hotel in the village, and further advised Janey regarding the buying of the nicest new bungalow.

The name of the company's man was Richard Train, who was skilled in engineering. He was a most willing and helpful young man, and he liked to help Janey, as she tenderly preserved Uncle Jared's belongings.

"I have been happy here," Janey told him, as she closed forever the little shop door.

"You will be happy any place," Richard Train answered, softly, "for you have the gift of a contented heart."

And when Richard Train was able to add to Janey's heart the greater gift of love—why, then Richard married Janey.

Island Once Pirate Lair?

The Galapagos Islands lie under the equator off the coast of Ecuador. The air is frequently chilly, due to the cold antarctic currents which fan the coast of Peru and strike seaward toward the island group. Wild goats, cattle, cats and dogs, as well as hidden treasure, bear evidence of pirates. The soil is rich red loam, nearly stoneless. There are but 3,500 head of cattle at present on Cristobal island and it can easily support 50,000. It is said that a three-year-old steer brings $100 (gold) live weight, at Guayaquil on the mainland—when a steamer can be induced to call and take the stock off.

LAURELVILLE

Visited by Fire Friday Night and House of William Stumpf Burned.
The two story frame house of William F. Stumpf was destroyed by fire nine o'clock Friday night. The house was completely gutted by fire. The home was formerly owned and occupied by Harvey Riegel, an uncle of Manager Earl W. Lutz of the Citizens Telephone company of this city.
The Laurelville fire apparatus, a 35 horse power pumping engine mounted on a truck was dragged to Laurel creek where water was pumped. The firemen, a volunteer company, were assisted by visitors at the Pumpkin show. The origin of the fire is unknown but it is thought that it may have originated from some rubbish deposited near the house. The house was valued at $5000 with insurance of $1600 in the Hummel & Plum agency.

INTRUDER FOUND AT WORK.
Returning to her home Tuesday night, Mrs. W. I. Hanna, 1249 Hamlet street, Columbus, found a young colored man at her ice box helping himself to a delicatessen meal. He made a hurried exit. Upon investigation it was found that the house had been ransacked, but nothing taken. Entrance was gained thru an open casement window.

WILL USE GAS IN FUTURE WARS

Entire Armies Will Be Put to Sleep and Made Prisoner, Says U. S. Chemist.

New York.—Whole armies put to sleep and taken prisoner in gas warfare is by no means an impossibility 25 years hence, Col. Raymond F. Bacon, chief of the technical division of the chemical warfare service, A. E. F., says in a description of the possibilities of the future art of war made public by the American Chemical society.

The $2,000,000 spent on the research organization did more toward winning the war, Colonel Bacon asserts, than any $200,000,000 spent in other ways.

Great Lesson of the War.
One of the greatest lessons of the war has so far gone almost unheeded, according to Colonel Bacon, who continues:

"To say the use of gas in warfare must be abolished is almost the same as saying that no progress must be made in the art of warfare toward making it more efficient or more humane.

"If one reads of the great battles of history, one will find that the victorious general conquered his enemy usually because of the fact that he so chose his position as to have his flank protected by river, mountain range or some naturally strong barrier.

"Much of the strategy of these battles consisted in maneuvering so as to obtain the advantage of position. With the use of gas it is possible to saturate a piece of ground so that no troops can cross it, and thus make an artificial barrier for the flank or protect the lines of communication. Moreover, these artificial barriers can be kept barriers for just as short a time as the strategy of the particular battle demands.

"These are but hints, but show the tremendous unexploited possibilities of gas in warfare.

Imagine Hand-to-Hand Battles.

"One can easily imagine the situation at the time the fighting was hand to hand with the spear or the sword, and gunpowder was first introduced, which in those days, perhaps, permitted the antagonists to fight at a range of 100 or 200 yards. There must have been a great outcry as to prohibiting the horrible new mode of warfare, and it must have been felt that it was very unfair to stand off 200 yards rather than to meet in combat man to man.

"But no one looking back on that period would attempt to say it was possible to have stayed the hand of progress and to have prevented by any legislation or agreement the use of gunpowder in warfare."

"Moreover, the consensus of opinion today would be that the hand-to-hand fighting with spear and sword was more cruel and inhumane than the fighting with the gun and the bullet. Similarly, at the present time we cannot effectually stay the progress of science, and to attempt to do so is not only unwise but is also preventing the possibilities of a really more humane type of war."

Australia Will Have Capital Like the U. S.

Melbourne.—The next session of the Australian parliament will be in Canberra, the new federal capital which, like Washington, D. C., is a city located and planned for the special purpose of being a national capital. The Australian capital was laid out by an American architect, Walter Burley Griffin of Chicago.

Canberra is situated on a splendid undulating plateau about 2,000 feet above sea level, a little to the north of the highest peaks of the Australian Alps.

The city site is divided by three large sheets of water, supplied by the sluggish Molonglo river, and adorned by parks and boulevards. The parliament house and government buildings will face a central lake, with streets laid out in octagonal form around them. On one side will be a fan-shaped residential quarter; on the other the university, municipal and industrial centers.

Main thoroughfares will radiate from the parliament building.

Blind Man Has Read Bible Through 15 Times

Middletown, Conn.—The feat of reading the Bible through 15 times in raised print has been completed by Urban L. Penney, a blind man of Winsted. It has taken him almost fifty years to complete the task. He has now started out to read the Bible through for the sixteenth time, although some of the volumes are in tatters in places from much handling. Mr. Penney learned the raised type at Perkins institution in Boston in the early 70s from the late Dr. Samuel G. Howe.

Snakes Spoiled His Fishing.

Sacramento, Cal.—James Remick, local auto accessory merchant, has just returned from a fishing trip in the wilds of Sierra county. Remick says, with much impressiveness, that in the stream where he angled for the elusive trout large and apparently hungry snakes grabbed the fish as fast as he hooked them. When Remick discovered what was happening, he simply wound up his line, declaring the competition was too keen.

GENEVA I. BENNETT DEAD.

Geneva I. Bennett, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Bennett, of Yellowbud, died at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shasteen, 236 Park street, Chillicothe, Wednesday at 8:40 p. m. The baby was born in Yellowbud April 9, 1923, and had been ill for the past five weeks. The parents, six brothers and one sister survive.

Funeral services from 236 Park street, Chillicothe, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Paulin officiated. Burial in Springbank cemetery.

BURIAL OF INFANT.

A stillborn child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Vanscoy of Dayton, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fowler, on East Water street Friday, September 21, 1923. Interment was in Forest cemetery Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

"The Store That Treats You Right"

Another Sparkling Compliment To Colwell & Katz's Integrity.

The wife of a customer we have served for a long while came to us the other day with the unusual request that we keep for her and take care of a 2 carat ring.

"My husband left the city today and I didn't want to keep this in the house while I was alone," she explained.

Of course we suggested a bank which is the proper place for valuables, but she was firm.

Now then, when the young wife of an old customer turns to us for safety and trusts us with the safe-guarding of a $2,200 ring—doesn't it follow that the man needing Fall clothing is pretty safe to trust us with his $35 to $50?

MOVES AGAINST KLAN LEADER

Walton Causes Grand Dragon to Be Charged With Riot.

SEQUEL OF MILITARY INQUIRY

Other Arrests Expected as the Result of the Oklahoma Governor's Crusade Against Klansmen—Governor Claims the Klan Is Whipped and That the Legislature Will Not Meet. Developments of the Day.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 22.—Governor J. C. Walton carried his war into the citadel of the "invisible empire" and caused N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the realm, to be charged with riot in connection with alleged disorders and terror.

The charge was preferred by County Attorney J. K. Wright, himself an admitted klansman, at the dictation of the military directorate. The complaint was filed before Justice of the Peace Leo White.

Several hours later Jewett was placed under arrest at his home. He was released on $1,000 bail shortly after a member of the sheriff's office took him into custody.

Action against the grand dragon came after several days' investigation by the military court of inquiry now sitting at military headquarters. Dr. A. A. Maupin, a dentist, and former klansman, was the witness relied upon chiefly for testimony to support the accusation made against Jewett. Maupin testified that Jewett participated in the flogging of E. R. Merriam here last year.

Jewett denied his guilt. "I never took part in a flogging or a riot in my life," he declared. "The testimony against me is a deliberate lie." While the governor thus continued to take the offensive, other arrests or charges are expected to be made involving prominent men of Oklahoma City.

Insofar as Governor Walton considers, the invisible empire is tottering, its power falling "before the greater, and the only constituted power of state government. The klans are whipped," said Walton in an informal talk with press correspondents.

"And what about the legislature?" he was asked. "It is not going to meet," the governor interposed sharply. "It may attempt to, but that is all, you may be sure. Even if it did, it would not be a meeting of the legislature, the house of representatives, but a meeting of the Ku Klux Klan in 'rump' convention. Sixty-eight of the so-called legislative quorum are klans members, including C. D. McBee, the leader."

In view of the governor's unshaken determination to block the legislative attempt to convene and the equally grim determination of the legislators, the approaching crisis on Wednesday is actually fraught with danger.

Frank M. Boyer, one of the committee of three which called the house of representatives for extra session, said that the legislators would demand admission to the house chamber, would then go to the door some time Wednesday and demand entry and thus court a clash and arrest by the military.

The governor made public his second installment of "the story of Oklahoma," the story on which Jewett's accusation of riot was founded. It was prefaced with a statement by the governor who promised, in one passage, that: "I will show conclusively from the evidence that the jury room, the sheriff's office and the offices of the chiefs of police in both Tulsa and Oklahoma City are under control of the 'invisible empire.'" The governor charged further that he would show from the record that the Ku Klux Klan is a lawless and criminal organization. When he began his investigation of the order it shipped its records to Atlanta Ga., to prevent their seizure, the governor said.

Blackmail Alleged.
Boston, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Nathaniel Franklin Emmons, Boston society leader and cousin of Bishop William Lawrence, appeared in the municipal court to press charges of a $10,000 blackmail attempt. She said she was the victim of an attempt by Arthur LeBaron of New York, whom she befriended in the course of war welfare work in which she took an extensive part. The charge stated that LeBaron presented a letter to the society women alleged to have been written by her to a veteran and demanded $10,000 for its surrender.

ARRESTS EXPECTED

Conspiracy to Defame Name of Wife of Millionaire Alleged.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Speedy action, charging subornation of perjury and conspiracy to defame the name of Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, in the divorce case of her aged millionaire husband, W. E. D. Stokes, is expected to follow confessions of three persons that they had been offered money to swear that Mrs. Stokes had been an inmate of a disorderly house before her marriage to Stokes.

The witnesses were Thomas Flynn, former sergeant of police, and two women, Bernice Hoyt and Julia Yancy. The police will bend every effort to find the "higher ups" behind the offer of bribery to defame Mrs. Stokes. As the result of the testimony of the witnesses a writ was issued attaching the books of a South Side detective agency.

"I was approached by a man who I knew to be a private detective," Flynn told Assistant State's Attorney Charles F. Wharton. "He asked me if I would mind signing an affidavit that I had booked Mrs. Stokes under the name of 'Helen Norwood' after a raid on the notorious Everleigh club. He offered to make it worth while. I declined and reported the case to Mr. Erbstein" (Mrs. Stokes' attorney).

RAIL SITUATION IS TAKEN UP

Coolidge to Seek Counsel From Every Angle.

NOT COMMITTED TO ANY PLAN

President to Confer With the Authors of the Present Transportation Act, Members of the Interstate Commerce Commission and Others Who Have Made a Close Study of Railroad Problems.

Washington, Sept. 22.—Before President Coolidge outlines a policy for dealing with the transportation question, he is going to seek counsel from every angle bearing on the railroad situation, it was made known at the white-house.

An authorized spokesman for the president was emphatic in the assertion that the executive had not committed himself to any one plan. Nor does the president assume responsibility for statements emanating from the white house callers that undertake to commit him on this or other questions, it was asserted with equal emphasis.

Before arriving at a decision on the railroad question, it was declared, the president will confer with Senator Cummins, a veteran on transportation legislation and one of the authors of the present transportation act, members of the interstate commerce commission and others who have made a study of railroad problems. He will get the benefit of their knowledge before forming any mature opinion on what the government should do in the way of additional legislation.

Already the president has met two parties of railroad executives and one group of railroad labor leaders, who gave him impressions of the railroad situation from those two important angles.

It is known that the president has not committed himself on the transportation question, even to his closest advisers. The assertion that the president does not take responsibility for expressions of views other than those made through authorized channels was prompted by an interview given by a white house caller, Nathan L. Amster of Boston, president of the national citizens' railroad league, in effect, stated that the president looked with favor on the 18 regional group plan of railroad consolidation.

AMERICAN VESSELS REMAIN ON HIGH SEAS

New Plan Being Evolved By the Shipping Board.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The American merchant marine flag will continue to fly in the trade lanes and marts of the world, notwithstanding the opinion of Attorney General Daugherty, which scrapped the Laker-Farley plan for their operation.

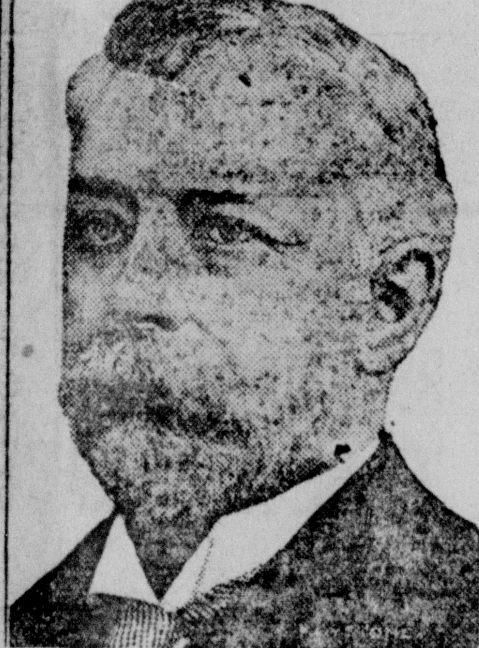

A new plan already has been evolved and is being prepared for presentation to President Coolidge. It provides for the lease to private corporations of trade routes and ships, with the government retaining control and title.

The new contemplated plan, it was stated, probably will be approved by the shipping board at a meeting Monday. It is said to overcome the legal objections raised by the attorney general in that there will be no exchange of stocks for the ships, but a lease, and that neither control of operation nor title will pass from the government's hands. In any event, it was emphasized both at the white house and the shipping board, the American merchant vessel is on the high seas to remain.

Donahay Urges Ouster Suit.
Columbus, Sept. 22.—Governor Donahay has renewed his request that Attorney General Crabbe bring suit in supreme court to oust George T. Poor of Cincinnati from membership on the public utilities commission. "I am still of the belief that the people of Ohio are entitled to an opinion of the Ohio supreme court determining the right of George T. Poor to hold office as a member of the utilities commission," Donahay said. "I earnestly renew my request of you to institute the proper proceedings."

HON. W. S. FIELDING

Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

URGES SPECIAL SESSION

Senator Dill Says Farmer Deserves Relief by the Government.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The tremendous pressure of the renewed demand for an extra session of congress to go to the rescue of the farmers is causing President Coolidge and his political advisers much concern. The president's ultimate action is awaited with extraordinary interest. In a telegram received from Senator C. C. Dill of Washington, the senator said: "A special session of congress is absolutely necessary immediately, if the government is to do justice to the farmers of the country this year. Everybody who has studied the situation knows that the farmers deserve relief by the government. The fact that there is no agreement on the exact legislation to be enacted is the strongest reason for immediately calling a special session."

Auto Goe Into Ditch.

Dayton, O., Sept. 22.—Rolla Snyder, 33, was instantly killed when the auto he was driving left the road and plunged into a ditch on the Dayton and Troy pike, near here.

DOINGS IN OHIO

State Schools Overcrowded.

Columbus, Sept. 22.—With increased enrollment expected at both the Ohio state school for blind and the state school for deaf, indications are that both schools will be overcrowded. The deaf school opened Wednesday and the enrollment now is 480. The enrollment was 539 last year, and about 600 students are expected this year. The enrollment, officials say, is far over the capacity of the building. At the school for blind a 20 per cent increase is expected.

Not In Presidential Race.

Cleveland, Sept. 22.—Governor Donahay will not be a candidate for the 1924 Democratic presidential nomination. He made this announcement, emphatically, upon his arrival in Cleveland. "Rumors that I am being considered for the presidential nomination or that I am considering becoming a candidate are absolutely unfounded," he said. "I would not consider it for a moment."

Suspect Bound Over.

Cleveland, Sept. 22.—Andrew Quinn, 22, was bound over to the grand jury in Judge Beebe's court here on charges of auto stealing, carrying concealed weapons and robbery. Bail was fixed at $12,000 for the three charges. Quinn was arrested with Harry Burrows, 16, and Gilbert Darnstadt, 17, charged with kidnaping Miss Florence Essig.

Result of Boys' Prank.

Niles, O., Sept. 22.—Five boys are under arrest here for stretching a chain between posts on either side of the Union cemetery entrance. When Mrs. Richard Phillips was driving into the cemetery to decorate her husband's grave, her machine struck the chain, wrecking the car and marring Mrs. Phillips seriously.

Ends Life by Shooting.

Cincinnati, Sept. 22.—Losing all of his money in the failure of his restaurant at Greenfield, O., is believed by police to have been the cause for Nicholas Hedges, 26, to end his life by shooting himself in the right temple in a cafe near Cincinnati.

Car Company's Ultimatum.

Newark, O., Sept. 22.—The Columbus, Newark and Zanesville Railway company has issued an ultimatum to the city council that unless a satisfactory franchise is granted to replace the one now existing, cars will stop running on Oct. 31.

DENBY TO RETIRE FROM CABINET

Roosevelt to Succeed Him as Secretary of the Navy.

IS COOLIDGE'S OWN CHOICE

Plan Carries With It the Appointment of Secretary Denby to Another Post, Probably an Ambassadorship. Young Roosevelt, as Assistant Secretary, Has Had Active Part in Administration of Navy Department.

Washington, Sept. 22.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt of Oyster Bay, N. Y., soon will become secretary of the navy, marking the first change in the Harding cabinet under the administration of President Coolidge, if present plans are carried out.

Edwin Denby of Michigan, at present secretary of the navy, has expressed a desire to retire. Young Roosevelt, now assistant secretary of the navy, is President Coolidge's own choice as Denby's successor.

To ascertain if the plan is acceptable to the New York state Republican organization, with which Roosevelt is closely identified, President Coolidge called into conference at the white house Senator James W. Wadsworth, Charles D. Hilles, New York Republican national committeeman; George K. Morris, New York Republican state chairman, and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt.

The plan carries with it the appointment of Secretary Denby to another post in keeping with the dignity and position of one who has occupied a cabinet portfolio. It is understood, however, that the selection of this new assignment has not been definitely determined.

It has been known for months that Secretary Denby has been desirous of retiring from the navy post to take up another line of service. The multiplicity of detail involved in the administration of the navy has made it an irksome task for him. Again he has felt a lack of co-operation and support in certain branches of the government that operated to handicap his plans for naval development.

This is reflected in the attitude of the budget bureau, which has slashed by some $70,000,000 the navy's 1925 appropriation estimates, and in other instances. Some months ago, before President Harding left Washington on his western trip, it was reported that Secretary Denby was desirous of giving up his cabinet place and that he was being considered for appointment as ambassador to Japan. The appointment of Cyrus E. Wood of Pennsylvania to the Japanese post precludes his receiving this place now, but some other diplomatic assignment may be found for him a little later.

It is doubtful if any assistant to a cabinet officer has had a more active part in the actual administration of a department as young Roosevelt has had with the navy. During the months that Secretary Denby was on his trip to Japan last year, and while he was absent from Washington for the naval maneuvers off Panama this year, Roosevelt was acting secretary.

HIT BY FROSTS

Supply of Seed Corn in Buckeye State May Be Scant.

Columbus, Sept. 22.—C. J. Willard, professor of farm crops at Ohio State University, issued a statement to the effect that early fall frozes that shivered ripening corn over a wide strip of northern central Ohio, and touched it elsewhere here and there, carries threat of a seed corn situation that may bring on a repetition of the "seed corn famine" of 1917.

Professor Willard recommended immediate seed selection by farmers of the better-formed and more mature ears, this selection to be in the field from the standing stalk. "Maturity," he said, "is the first thing to be sought in seed corn any year, and this year mature ears are doubly worth looking for. They are the ones which have most nearly escaped frost and freeze. By selection from the standing stalk, one can judge the worth of the whole plant and its performance under different conditions of competition as well as the form, size, freedom from disease and maturity of the ears."

Woman Loses Life.

Cleveland, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Irene Cathcart, 28, of this city, was killed when an auto driven by Henry Goddoli plunged over a 30-foot embankment. Goddoli told police he escaped by jumping. He said the auto skidded on the wet pavement.

AROUND BATTLESHIPS

United States Navy Must Be Built, Says Naval Expert.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The United States navy must be built around the battleship rather than the airplane, Captain Luke McNamee, director of naval intelligence, maintained in an address delivered by radio. He spoke for "a navy that can stand up and take blows and hit back harder than the other fellow, a navy with battleships and airplanes. The way to win wars, he pointed out, "is to go after the other fellow and hit him where he lives."

Captain McNamee emphasized the view that the United States could not hope to win a war "by sitting at home on the defensive," even on the precarious assumption that airplanes might be able to protect American continental shores. It would be essential, he said, to bring "military pressure to bear against the enemy to compel him to accept peace or give up our possessions." If the United States had no navy but relied solely on a huge air fleet, according to Captain McNamee, an enemy could capture Panama, Porto Rico, Alaska, the Philippines, the Virginia Islands, Hawaii, Guam and Samoa, because he "would sink every transport that we sent out with reinforcements for any of these places." No defense, he asserted, can exist indefinitely if it can not be reinforced.

BERLIN OFFICIAL WORRIED

Settlement of Ruhr Problem May Mean Secession of Bavaria.

Berlin, Sept. 22.—The last 24 hours has brought no relief to the crisis in the German domestic political situation. The coalition parties remain firmly convinced that immediate settlement of the Ruhr question is vital, but they make no attempt to dissemble the fear that the immediate result will be the separation of Bavaria from the German republic.

It was learned from a reliable source that Minister of Defense Gessler, who has just returned from Bavaria, brought back very pessimistic reports of conditions there. On the other hand, General Ludendorff, in a Munich newspaper, says "There must be no thought of a separation of Bavaria from Germany."

The communists are steadily increasing their activity. Their plans obviously contemplate Saxony and Thuringia as the places for the gathering of the combined red forces in the event of Bavaria's defection from the German federation.

Publishers Accept Contract.

New York, Sept. 22.—Publishers of New York daily newspapers announced that they had accepted a contract presented by the board of directors of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' union. The publishers' announcement said: "The agreement announces the dissolution of the old local pressmen's union and the restoration of its charter. The international union enters directly into relations with the publishers. The working hours are reduced from 48 hours day and night to 41 hours night and 45 hours day, with a basic wage increase of $3 a week."

Motors Show to Best Advantage Under Tutelage of the Good Form Driver.

(By ERWIN GREER, President of Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

When the ponies are clattering in on the home stretch, all other things being equal, it is the headiest rider that brings his mount first under the wire. Just as a Kentucky filly responds splendidly to the rein of a skilled driver, so does the thoroughbred of motors show its mettle to the best advantage under the tutelage of the "good form" driver.

Pleasure in Motoring.

Half the pleasure in motoring comes with learning to manipulate your car with consummate ease and grace. Correct form in driving means minimum strain on car mechanism and incidentally minimum drain on the pocket-book. Velvety stops and starts prevent unusual strains on the motor, clutch, transmission, axles and tires. They also cut down the consumption of gasoline and oil. A well-made motor, like a Swiss watch, is a sensitive thing. It resents abuse but responds willingly, capably to gentle handling.

Starting an automobile is an art. Simple though it may be, nevertheless there are hordes of drivers who never acquire it. The master driver aims to create a steady pull on the driving mechanism from the moment he slips into first speed until the car is under full headway. To wit, a homely formula for starting which may be taken after the entree of gear shifting: Learn to Accelerate.

Learn to accelerate simultaneously with letting in the clutch. The mechanical act of gear shifting can be learned in five minutes.

As soon as you have the car in high speed, assume a natural, comfortable position. Avoid a strained, high-tension grip on the wheel. Driving a car is not tiresome if one sits in an easy upright position. The driver who slouches in his seat must be constantly shifting. He cannot apply the brakes without sitting erect. He must change his position to shift gear.

It is quite as essential to know how to stop the car quickly and smoothly as it is to know how to start it. The operation of braking is one of the most important in driving.

Worshiped at Shrine of Speed.

The highways are strewn with the wrecks of cars whose drivers, worshiped at the shrine of speed. When the crisis comes the green driver is apt to forget the counsels of his glib instructor and another accident is chalked to the toll of "I didn't know." If you must test the spirit of your car, wait until you are perfectly sure of your ability to drive, until you would be willing to be the man in the tonneau.

You have heard many an enthusiastic owner boast that his car could take such and such a hill on "high." Doubtless it will, but at the same time he is putting an unnecessary strain upon his motor when he forces such a performance. The intermediate speed is placed on the car to use. It is a mistake to allow the motor to labor.

Good Accident Preventive.

Second speed is a good accident preventive when threading the maze of city traffic. The car is easily held under leash and may be stopped gently without jamming the brakes.

Only an amateur will allow his motor to race unnecessarily. Motor racing consumes gasoline in appalling drafts, and is also hard on the engine. After you have learned the A, B, C's of car manipulation, adopt the accelerator instead of the throttle-lever on the steering wheel.

When you come to a stop in traffic, don't forget the man behind. The hand held up in warning may save a rear-end collision. Show your intention of swerving off into a side street by holding out your arm horizontally. These signs have become accepted among motorists as a universal sign language. It's these little courtesies that help to make motoring a pleasure.

AUTOMOBILE MIGHTY HANDY FOR FARMERS

Faster Than Any Other Means of Transportation.

A writer, in discussing the relation of the automobile on the farm, says that after a hard day's work it is a pleasure to get into a car and take a 25-mile spin. We rest as we do, and study the methods of our neighbors.

Moreover, the automobile has another service to perform. It can bring more rapidly than your best horse "first aid to the injured." If there is an accident to a child or man, and a doctor or a surgeon is needed in a hurry, the automobile can bring him faster than any other means of transportation.

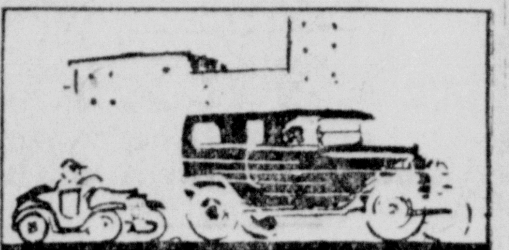

If there is trouble in the field, if some part of your farm machinery is broken down, the automobile can bring from town the needed help or the parts that you need to set the machine in motion again.

Again, the automobile brings the farmer closer to the market, whether it is the local or the distant market, and enables him to market his produce more rapidly and on better terms. The writer to whom we have referred says that he has a machine that has run for 16 months on the original set of tires, with only $3.25 expense for patching tubes. He says the purpose of his machine is pleasure, business and marketing; that he has hauled apples, potatoes, oats, eggs, butter, pigs, calves and hatched it to the hay rope to unload hay into the mow.

AVOID TRAILING IN TRAFFIC

No Use Running Risk of Bumping Into Expensive Cars on Congested City Streets.

Here is a hint for the man who drives through congested city streets: Don't trail behind expensive cars. The best of drivers find themselves ramming into the rears of other cars.

Don't Trail High-Priced Cars.

or clipping off rear fenders. It's inevitable in traffic such as we know it today.

But there is no use running the risk of bumping a $10,000 gold-plated-palace-on-wheels when there are thousands of dilapidated buses to stick behind.

The owner or driver of an expensive car is much more likely to raise a rumpus if you hit his property because a slight scratch looks like the dickens. Some drivers of flivvers, or near-flivvers, are likely to mistake a bump for pep in the motor.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

A motorist who "slips" his clutch, scorches and hardens the leather on the cone.

When planning a trip of any length, it is a wise motorist that inventories his car and its equipment.

At the same time that you grind in the valves, clean the stems of all foreign matter and make them bright and shiny.

Always be careful to attach the rope to some part of the frame and not to the axle whenever it is necessary for a car to tow another.

A small bottle of shellac should always be carried in the car as it is invaluable for many purposes in an emergency. Gasoline will not dissolve shellac.

When the starting motor for any reason lacks power to turn over the crankshaft it may be strengthened by coupling on another storage battery, connecting it in multiple so as not to increase the voltage.

Limitation of Planes.

Limitation of air armament through an international conference is proposed in an editorial in the current issue of the American Legion Weekly. The sea-power question has been settled through the Washington conference and the lead-power problem has been settled theoretically by the reduction of armies, but the air-power question has not been touched. It is pointed out. Delay in calling the conference, complicates the situation and increases the dangers, the Legion publication says.

History.

History is the first distinct product of man's spiritual nature, his earliest expression of what can be called thought.—Carlyle.

Black in Evidence for Fall Dresses

Darker Materials Take an Early Lead in Modes for New Season.

Black frocks predominate in the early fall exhibits, with navy blue as the only close competitor, notes a fashion writer in the Washington Star. Fabrics are unusually interesting, though, and they more than make up for the lack of variety in color tones. Several new satins have made their appearance—soft clinging, crepe-like silks that lend themselves admirably to drapery and pebbly-surfaced satins that are effective in plainer models, with little or no trimming.

Ecru lace is a favored medium for collars and cuffs, while beige georgette and eyelet-embroidered organdie are also popular. Some frocks, fashioned on simple, straight lines, combine two of them. For instance, one attractive model seen was of pebbly black satin, with the bateau neck bordered by a rolled-over collar of openwork beige organdie frilled with several tiers of narrow self-color lace. Gauntlet cuffs of organdie, also edged with lace fluting, added the only other touch of trimming.

One street frock was of navy blue Poirer twill, cut on rather severe tailored lines, and yet trimmed with soft lace frills, which contradicted the tailored effect. It was fashioned in one straight piece, with a rounded neck bordered by a pointed collar and long sleeves molded to fit the wrists like gloves. A jabot of shirred ecru lace drooped from the collar fastening, while lace ruffles bordered the sleeves, half-veiling the hands, and extended

Frock of Navy Poirer Twill With Lace Jabot and Sleeve Frills.

In straight lines up the side of each sleeve, nearly touching the elbows. Green braid, stitched in silver and outlined on one side with a narrow thread of gold braid and on the other with red, outlined both collar and sleeve ends, and also framed the lace frills at the side of each sleeve. Additional strips of the three-tone braid were applied over each hip in a conventional pattern and extended the length of the skirt at each side, forming pseudo-panels. Three long tassels of dark blue silk dangled from the braid outlines on the hips, adding the finishing touches to the model.

Hand Knit Frocks Are Chic for Sports Wear

Hand-knit sports frocks for madame and mademoiselle are among the smart knitted garments worn by women who dress well. But if a woman can wield a knitting needle, she can have the same frock at much less cost.

Some of the frocks are made in one piece, with low V-neck and plain stocking stitch for three-quarters of the way, and in squares or plaids, as you will, of the knit and purl combination. The skirt ends with a plain hem effect in the stocking stitch. Others are two-piece. Yellow, tan, beige, powder blue, green and white, in one tone or with another color combined, are used for these frocks.

The softest yarns should be used. Some of the frocks are embroidered in Angora or brush wool, and still others are trimmed with worsted yarn flowers or conventional designs which are appliqued on.

Metallic Fabrics Reign Supreme.
A most outstanding thing in the interesting fashions for fall is the undeniable supremacy of metallic fabrics and effects. Entire gowns of richly embroidered cloth of gold are not restricted to the slim draped lines known in the past, but are shown in almost bouffant style in several instances.

Smart New Fall Coat, Black and White Wool

Perhaps one of the smartest coats for the fall season is this imported model of white and black wool, colored with silver fox.

Interesting Notes of Fashions in Apparel

The unexpected in color, detail and fabric gives much of charm to the numbers shown, which include a majority of formal and semiformal gowns.

The newer coats and capes of today have the most demure of linings. Wood-browns, deep grays, blues and unobtrusive greens are in order instead of the gay linings formerly seen. Cyclamen pink and silver is one of the smart color combinations just now. A cape of silk crepe in cyclamen is lightly embroidered in silver thread and trimmed with bands of silver fox.

Summer ermine or brown lace is very effective. This gown in semibouffant style shows the lace over a gold underbody and gains a rich appearance by a ribbon sash of henna and purple, which ties in front.

Embroidered orange mousseline de soie is the usual trimming note on a brown velvet afternoon gown. This makes a deep edge on V-shaped neck and forms the flowing sleeves that drop from the elbow.

Another afternoon gown of almond-green bands its skirt with squares of gold metal cloth edged in lace and piped with green in almost indiscernible width. This number ties at one side with a generous sash.

The shoes for late summer and early fall wear grow more and more elaborate. Evening shoes today have "log-cabin" designs—gray suede, much cut out over a black satin underlay, or field-mouse patent leather over satin in a beige tone. Even the high heels are similarly striped.

One of the Lanvin models is developed in a petrole blue taffeta. The bodice, made with a square neck, is long and semifitted, and the skirt is composed of three deep ruffles whose fullness is accentuated by hooped support. Appliqued taffeta roses in natural color eased onto the fabric with silk stitching are its only trimming.

Mode Variety Permits Individuality Display

Gone, and almost forgotten, for the time at least, is that sweet simplicity in dress poets once extolled.

Even the little dance frocks, flounced and frilled, girlish at first glance, at second glance disclose among their innocent looking folds rhinestones enough to weight a court train. Bugles, beads, embroideries, striking contrasts in color and in material, ornamentation of all sorts, is the order of the new day. In these effects fur plays an important part, with Russian suggestion, and lace adds many a Spanish touch to an American product.

Happily, there is variety. All figures may be suited. All types of women are in a fair way to be pleased, and certainly the task of pleasing is made easier for the salesperson. The straight tubelike silhouette is retained. The bouffant skirt remains in the picture. The circular flare that starts at the hip has taken on new impetus by way of inserted godets. Most important of all because most radically different, is the new silhouette that starts out to be tubelike and then suddenly at or below the knee flares out by means of a circular or plaited flounce. In these four distinct figure outlines, we have more opportunity for individual expression than in many a season past.

Moire for the Mature Gown.
Moire in both subdued and bright tones is recognized as a suitable material for the mature evening gown. In the models shown in this material, the swathed silhouette and several instances of the back drape are noted. Chiffon is presented as an ideal material for bouffant evening dresses and when these delicately colored and daintily developed numbers are not trimmed with many rows of lace, rhinestone studs are selected as a garniture.

Retains Narrow Hemline.
A gown that satisfies the present fad for plaited flounces and yet retains a narrow hemline has the two flounces arranged tunic fashion over a right underskirt which shows just a few inches.

BUOYS ALL HAVE A MEANING

About Forty Different Types Used to Guide and Warn Ships.

When you are at the seaside stand on the beach and look out to sea. You will, no doubt, notice a number of buoys bobbing up and down in the water. In all there are about 40 different types, and to the ordinary person they all seem to mean the same, but if you get hold of an "old salt" and ask him for their meanings, you will be surprised with the host of interesting information he will give you.

He will tell you that a green-painted buoy marks a wreck. A deep-water channel is often marked by 70 or more buoys.

Perhaps one of the most uncanny sounds a person can wish to hear is the muffled tolling of a bell buoy on a wild night when the sea is very rough. Stand on the shore, or at the end of the pier, and you will hear it quite distinctly when the wind drops for a moment.

Then there is the gas bell buoy. Highly compressed gas is stored in the base of the buoy, and is forced up by pipes into a lantern. There are lenses that help to add brilliance to the light, which flashes out its warning day and night until all the gas is used. The usual time of refilling is about a fortnight.

There is also an anchor buoy which looks like a barrel on the water. It is filled with cork, and is anchored to the sandy bed of the sea. This buoy is intended to warn ships not to cast anchor in the vicinity, there being a cable laid near.—London Tit-Bits.

TIME OF WILDCAT BANKS

Name for Unsound Depositories Was Derived From Picture of Early Day Notes.

The term "wildcats," today applied to worthless securities of any description, was originally the name given to certain banks in Michigan. Back in 1837 there was a severe financial panic. Many banks failed. The currency which they had circulated became worthless, many bogus banks started up and issued "bank notes" and the country was overrun with a swarm of counterfeiters. Banking and business were demoralized and, to make matters worse, lax legislation was passed in many states, permitting almost any kind of financial robbery in the name of banking.

Such was the case in Michigan, where 40 banks were started under a law of fraudulent character. These banks were called "wildcats" because the bank notes issued by them bore a picture of that animal. All but four of these failed within two years, hence the term "wildcat" to denote a very insecure financial obligation.—Muncie Bank Bulletin.

Romance of Stolen Mail Bag.

The English post office department maintains an official of the nature of a historian whose duty is, among other things, to collect and record various data about the service. One of the most curious exhibits of the department is a time-worn oil-canvas mail bag—a reminiscence of a daring mail robbery. This bag is over 100 years old, and was forcibly taken by an armed footpad one evening in February, 1798, from the postboy who was carrying the mails between York and Selby. A reward was offered for the apprehension of the robber, but no trace of him or the mail bag was found until nearly eighty years later. The discovery then came about in a most singular manner. In 1876 an old way-side inn was being demolished at Churchill near Selby, and in the rafters the workmen found, among other things, the long-lost mail bag, it having evidently been hidden there by the highwayman of 1798, after being despoiled of its contents.

Dogs' Limitations.

An investigation is being made as to the truth of an Arab assertion that dogs cannot follow the trail of a naked person. A number of writers vouched for the correctness of the contention and proffered the results of their own experiences. One of the letters received was from a French officer who had spent many years among the Arabs. He says in his letter: "Once, when I found myself with a moving column in Morocco, a sentry of mine was stabbed no farther than 30 feet from my tent by three Arabs, who came in the night, entirely naked, wishing to steal a gun. Two very good watch dogs lay in my tent, but neither moved; and there were other dogs in the camp, but all were perfectly still as the Arabs came and went." The writer of the letter argues that this fact proves the point, but adds that Arabs themselves declare they are unable to explain it.

Curious Changes in Eyes of Fish.

A study of the different forms and habits of fishes will bring most interesting things to light. An instance: One of the most peculiar things about flounders is that the young of the species swim upright as in the case of all adults of any ordinary species. The eyes of young flounders are like those of any ordinary fish, one being situated on each side of the head. Gradually, however, a change comes in the appearance of the young flounder. As it grows one of the eyes travels around to the side of the head until both are on the same side. Subsequently this side becomes the upper side of the head. Most of this rotation of the eye is a rapid process, taking no more than three days.

China Clay.
China clay is nothing but decayed granite and much of it is dug up from pits in Cornwall, England. It is mixed with water and run into a series of ponds, where the heavy impurities sink to the bottom, leaving a thin paste of fine clay. When this settles it is dried into bricks, ready to go to the potteries.

MOTHER

Who Made Greatest Sacrifice is Sought by American Legion.

General Chauncey B. Baker, the new commander of the American Legion of Ohio, has issued the following letter and it is hoped that all will take heed to the subject of which he speaks and that everyone will co-operate to the end that the Ohio mother who has made the greatest sacrifice may receive proper recognition.

The letter sent out is as follows:

"The state of Ohio will pay the expense to the National Convention of the American War Mothers in Kansas City, Missouri, from September 29 to October 5, of the Ohio mother who sent the greatest number into the service in the late war and out of that number lost the most.

"The government of Ohio has asked the American Legion of Ohio to name the Ohio mother who made this greatest sacrifice. Accordingly, you are urged to take immediate steps to determine the mother in your community who, in your opinion, made the greatest sacrifice and write us immediately setting forth the details of her sacrifice together with her name and address.

"It is necessary that your nomination of the mother for this honor be in department headquarters not later than September 25th, next Tuesday. Please give this matter your immediate attention and report at once so that no one who merits the honor will be overlooked. Get immediate publicity in your local newspapers so that your entire community will know that you are making such a selection and so that the public of your community may feel free to call your attention to any mother of your community who would be eligible to such an honor. Attending physicians state his condition is too serious to permit him to be moved.

HARTMAN THEATER

Here is an opportunity not to be overlooked. George M. Cohan, the "Yankee Doodle Boy" author and producer of more great successes than any one genius of the theater in the world has a brand new one that is to be presented at the Hartman theater in Columbus the week of Monday, September 24.

His new production, which is to be seen in Columbus before sophisticated Broadway gets a glimpse of it, is "The Song and Dance Man" and George M. Cohan wrote it especially for his new star, Lynne Overman. It is safe to say that George has "put another winner across the plate" and Hartman patrons are among the very first to see it.

It is said that Cohan had the idea suggested by the title in mind for some time and originally expected to play in it himself, but decided that Lynne Overman could better carry the character. Before he wrote a line of the script he engaged his full cast of players to support Overman with the result that each part is particularly adapted to the individual player engaged.

Much can be expected, therefore, from such sterling people as Overman, Frederick Perry, Will Deming, Louis Calhern, Robert Cummings, Eleanor Woodruff, Maye Methot, Laura Bennett and others.

The story of "The Song and Dance Man" is said to be unique in its style and plot. Mr. Cohan characterizes it as "an American comedy, but in keeping with the usual Cohan policy the doughty little producer does not wish to divulge the nature of the plot preferring to spring a complete surprise on his friends and admirers.

Mail orders should be sent to the Hartman boxoffice at once as the demand for reservations promises to be heavy. A Cohan offering is always an event of much note and in view of the fact that Columbus is to see it first even before the New York premiere the interest therein is of double intensity.

The engagement is for an entire week with the usual matinees.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"He's been everywhere." The Detective was enthusiastic. "He joined the army and served a couple of tricks; then went into the navy and around the world. It is wonderful to listen to him talk. He was 30 when he put on civilian clothes and he joined at 17."

"I can't get het up about it, Kelly," replied the Hotel Stenographer. "Those guys who use a suitcase for a permanent home and general delivery as a regular address, never appealed to me as sweeties. Some of the best-traveled men in the world dry dishes in their wives' boarding houses."

"The chap who starts to see the world first settles down afterwards never has much to settle down to when settling time comes."

"The fellow who makes his pile first and does his traveling afterwards is the most worth while, even if he does no more traveling than the other fellow does settling."

"Nix on the travelers, Kelly. All a husband needs to know about traveling is the most direct route from his job to his home on pay nights."

AMUSEMENTS

It took seventy-two hours to film a single scene in "The White Flower" Betty Compson's latest Paramount picture, which will be the feature at the Met theater next Monday. For three days and nights the camera remained in position for one single scene—a "shot" of a night-blooming cereus in blossom.

This flower—a gorgeous white blossom found in Hawaii—blooms but once and then at midnight. The bud remains open for only a short time and the flower dies immediately after it has blossomed.

James Van Trees, the cameraman, selected a promising bud and placed his camera in position. Lights were placed so that enough illumination to photograph would be available at a moments notice. And then it was necessary to sit down and wait until the blossoms opened.

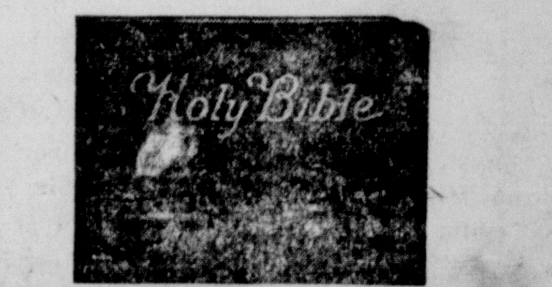

Just before dawn of the third night vigil the cereus blossomed and the record of it was secured.

Because of the title of this Paramount picture and the symbolism of the night blooming cereus it was deemed necessary to go to this tremendous expenditure of time for one small scene.

"The White Flower" was filmed in Hawaii under the direction of Mrs. Julia Crawford Ivers, who wrote the story of the photoplay during a recent visit to the islands. Miss Compson plays the role of a half caste girl and is supported by a cast which includes Edmund Lowe, Arline Pretty, Leon Barry, Sylvia Ashton, Edward Martindel and Arthur Hoyt. There are many thrilling moments in the development of the story.

Asks For Receiver.

The National Power Machinery company, of Cleveland, has filed a civil action against the Soyco Mills company, in which they ask to have a receiver appointed on a claim due them to the amount of $300 with interest from May 22, 1923. Powell & Powell, of Columbus, represent the plaintiffs.

The trouble it seems arises over the fact that the defendants purchased a dynamo of the plaintiffs and which the latter claims has not been paid, the accounts being now overdue.

The plaintiffs make sensational charges attacking the credit of the defendants, claiming that on June 11, 1923 and agreement was made between the defendant company and the Corporation Underwriters Syndicate, that the latter would take over the defendant company and that the Syndicate would take over all the bills and indebtedness of defendant company which would be paid by the Corporation Underwriter Syndicate in accordance with certain options and agreements and they allege that the contract was not carried to completion for the reason that the statement of indebtedness made by the defendant was not true.

The property held by the defendant company, it is alleged is worth less than $25,000 and their outstanding and valid indebtedness amounts to approximately $50,000 which they are unable to pay.

They also claim that the Soyco Mills company has no one in charge of their interests and that their assets are being lost and dissipated and that the property was taken over by the Crites-Hefner Mills company, which is operating the mills.

How Tulleries Got Name.

The famous palace of the Tulleries in Paris received its name from the tile yards on whose site it was built. These tile yards were of ancient date, mention being made of them as early as the Thirteenth century. Later they were abandoned and a house was built over them. In 1564 Catherine de Medici began the erection of a royal palace. It was seized by the revolutionists in 1792, in 1830 and in 1848. It was finally burned in 1871 and its ruins were undisturbed until 1883. All that remains of it now are two pavilions, which are joined to two arms of the Louvre. The site of the palace is now occupied by the Tulleries Garden, a popular promenade.

Shrine in the Garage.

People used to have large open fireplaces, and they cooked everything at them and sat about them when they had finished eating. A later period glorified, as the center of home life, the kitchen range, the starting place of all good pie. Now people have steam heat and go to the delicatessen store. The Lares and Penates haven't died. They are immortal. They have only moved out into the little garage with the galvanized tin roof, and people are worshipping them now just as much, lying on their backs tightening the chassis nuts, as when they were gazing at dying embers.—From the New Republic.

REV. ELLIS E. SNYDER To Open Vocal Studio in Circleville

On Monday afternoon and evening, September 17 and every Monday thereafter Rev. Snyder will meet any persons desiring to consult with him about vocal study. His studio will be in the basement of Trinity Lutheran church.

Besides being assistant pastor of this church he is instructor of voice at Capital university, Columbus. For several seasons past Rev. Snyder has studied with the famous New York vocal pedagogue, Herbert Wither- spoon. He is authorized to give vocal instructions by the Chicago Musical college, the largest music school in America and during the last summer has been studying with the Belgian baritone, Louis Graveure. For appointment call 322. Sept 15-17-22.

COPYING THE BANE OF ART

Critic Believes That Americans Neglect Real Artistic Beauty for European.

Copying is still carried so far that ornament is copied all the time instead of being created, says Allen Tucker, in the North American Review, and I am told that in offices the draftsman must show his original for everything he does. Out of such a system artists do not come.

It is generally Europe that is copied. I know we came from Europe, are Europeans, but we have ourselves by now, an accomplishment of our own, and until recently, when there is a rather senseless copying of the external or colonial stuff, we never cast our eyes on our own things. The buildings of value we had have been careless of. Think of dumping that post office where it ruins the appearance of our lovely city hall! Think of the savage and senseless destruction of St. John's chapel of Trinity parish, with its unrivaled spire!

We copy the old things. We do not seek to develop the artistic spirit that made nearly everything it touched a thing of delight and beauty. I think it was Mr. Lay who first pointed out what so few realize, that the New England town is the only town anywhere originally built on a plan, the only town made with a design, the only town with a feeling for form instinct in its very bones.

We rave about Italian villages and never see the quality of our native towns. I don't believe in the American eagle screaming, but there is no reason why he should spend his time sitting on foreign eggs in the attempt to hatch out what are always foreign birds, while so often the eggs have proved to be nothing but china somewhat devoid of life.

This song has literally sung its way around the world, touching high and low, inspiring deeds of heroism on the battle field as well as deeds of patient goodness in the most obscure corners. It was a woman who wrote the poem and she never, in her wildest dreams imagined that it would become the lever by which hundreds of thousands of lives would be moved. It came to her out of the fullness of a heart in which the love of God blazed and of what she considered to be the dim little corner of life in which she found herself confined.

She had had many ambitions. She had wanted to be a writer. She had had dreams of doing good in the world in a large, wonderful way. Hers was a consecrated heart and mind, eager for the Lord's service. Later, as her soul developed she wished to carry the Gospel of Christ to foreign lands or to help in uplifting the poor and forlorn in the dark places of our great cities. Despite her longings and her steady application of her talents and her prayers that a way might open to her she was relentlessly refused what she most desired.

Her husband was a railway mail clerk and was often absent from home but the time which might otherwise have been occupied in her literary work was taken up by the care of her small boy and her father who was an invalid. It seemed as tho she must put her ambitions for the development of her talents out of her life—as tho it were impossible ever for her to reach into a broader sphere.

No one knows except the person who yearns to write great and beautiful thoughts, which may some day electrify the world, what a heartache and soul wrench it is to have abandon those ambitions.

It almost broke down her cheery spirit. Not because she could not find comfort in knowing that she was doing all that she could, but because her spirit ceaselessly fretted for the doing of larger things. It seemed to her that what she actually did was so very, very little.

One day, however, a mother of the neighborhood—poor and hard worked too—told her that the hours which she passed in her quiet home were the bright spots in her life. That set her to thinking.

Up to that time she had interested herself of course, in others, but she had done it conscientiously, not enthusiastically. She wondered if any spark from the hours spent with her would illuminate other lives in the after years.

She set herself to becoming an inspiration to those about her. She tried to throw the light of her own vision upon them. She remembered that she might sow in their hearts the seeds of the love of God. It was an outlet, a little outlet, for the zeal which was in her.

She set herself resolutely to do all that she possibly could in the little corner of the world, where, it seemed, God chose to keep her. Nothing in her life was, apparently, changed by her new feeling. Nothing but herself. Within her now, she began to feel a well of happiness. She lost the sense of being shut away from the world. She forgot that the domestic duties with which she was ceaselessly occupied were little, trivial things. She saw that certain tasks were given her to do, and that the iron barriers, which hemmed her in from what she had wanted to do, were also the restraining bonds which outlined the sphere of her work and life.

The history of the song from that date is a matter of gospel history. In the past ten years that song has been published more often than any other gospel song.

One of the stories of this song has to do with a man so far away from its author, that under any other conditions it is almost impossible that their lives should have had any contact.

He is the head of a national business. He is a big man in the world of finance, not only in this country, but in others. Until recently he was just a splendid thinking machine. People were afraid of him. His employees, even men high in his confidence, found it difficult to talk to him. Those in subordinate positions trembled when he looked their way, for he never did so unless he had found a flaw in their work.

even in his home city to which he never gave a thought.

The puncture was a bad one and he grew a little bored. The thousands and thousands who kept pouring into the tabernacle riveted his attention, despite his struggle not to be interested. He began to wonder what the building was and what was going on inside. Then his chauffeur reported that he would have to put on an emergency tire.

The chauffeur finished his work and looked inside the car for his employer, but he was not there.

A boy, who was standing near, told him that the other had gone into the tabernacle. The chauffeur was so surprised that he nearly fainted, for he had never known his employer to attend any meeting but a board meeting of financiers.

Among those who "hit the trail" that night was the man of iron and steel. He sat down in his turn to wait for us to write down his name, his address and his church preferences, as we always do, and to one of the workers who approached him for that purpose he gave something of his remarkable story.

Some converts seem dazed by the experience thru which they have just gone and some are so happy that they cannot help crying, but the man of iron and steel was simply more efficient, more composed and more keen than usual. He had already analyzed his own change of heart and wanted to tell about it.

"I don't suppose a man like you can realize how I could have become so cold and indifferent to everyone and everything in the world as I have become," he said. "I began my business life when I was a very young man. All I thought about was money. I saw that many men failed to get money because they stopped for other things and I determined that I would so train my mind that it would not recognize the existence of anything else but money. I succeeded. I taught myself to look on those around me as so many shadows out of which I could extract what I wanted.

"I have not married, and so family life did not have an opportunity to soften me. I don't think I ever loved a person in my life, certainly not since I was a man. I have never given a thought to friendship in my life. I never read books that dealt with sentiment, I never read anything in the newspapers but the financial reports, I care nothing for music or the arts.

"When I came here tonight I did not even know what was going on. I had to wait outside while my chauffeur put on a new tire and I was bored.

"I listened tonight for the first time to men talking about the things I have always refused to consider—God and humanity. Then there came that song, 'Brighten the Corner' and in its simple melody and message heard something that finished my decision. I am going to begin the job of brightening my corner on business lines."

The degree and extent to which he bent his word is common talk in his home city and state. He is a man now to whom his associates go for help when they are in tight places. He has given royally to every humanitarian cause which has come to his notice. He is a power now in that church of which he was a merely nominal member for so many years. And in his office, among his associates and his employees, he is the friend, the adviser, the sympathetic, ever-ready listener, who is all but adored by those who know him.

Once, as one of my friends was getting my collars from a Chinese laundry a few blocks from the tabernacle, he heard a queer, falsetto voice singing words which sounded vaguely familiar.

"Brighten the colna wel you al" was what reached his ears.

The proprietor, a very bright, well educated Chinese, called the singer from the tubs and in his odd, clipped speech, he began to tell him another story of the results of that marvelous little song.

He was a "Christian" now, he said. He had hit the "trail," as he called it. He did not know, very well, how to sing "Melican" fashion, but he loved that "Brighten the Colna" song. Chang today, has established one of the most unique Christian enterprises in the country. He has formed a little school over a stable where he holds meetings for the members of his own race. He has interested several women of the neighborhood in his work, who teach English classes twice a week. One of them is a vocal instructor who is laboring with the difficulties of training the Chinese throat into a normal pitch, instead of the high falsetto, natural to the race.

She writes that Chang is really inspired. He has even brought to conversion several American customers of the laundry, where he is still employed. He has succeeded in Christianizing his employer, one of the most inscrutable and suave of Chinamen, all the harder to touch because of his many sided mental development, for he is an accomplished Confucian scholar and can argue on any religion, or about any form of philosophy.

Chang loves to sing and it is the grief of his life that he has never succeeded in acquiring that gift. Also, it has been impossible, so far, for him to master English. He still "Brightens" his corners and otherwise allows the letter "r" to elude him, but in earnestness of his missionary spirit he overcomes these obstacles.

It is only recently that his American associates learned that his first effort at brightening his corner was to conquer his own habit of taking opium. What he must have suffered in his solitary task of self-reformation, no one can imagine, unless they know something of the fearful toll which that drug exacts from those who seek to release themselves from its blight.

Usually, the services of a doctor and nurses and special treatment are necessary as well as the most earnest efforts of the subject, himself. Yet Chang accomplished it alone.

And sometimes in his meetings over the stable, he tells of his experience. He says that when he was so racked and torn by his fight that he thought he would surely die, he tried to sing, and he sang over and over the song which had first made him realize the beginning of his upward way was to remove the darkness which had for so long shrouded his soul.

This is a far, far cry from the author of the little song—in her quiet home, following her domestic duties, and thinking that the scope of her influence must always be confined within four walls, isn't it?

God's message knows no limits of space, or society, or race, or creed.

Aldrich's Critic.

"As time went on," says Ferris Greenslet of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, "he was growing increasingly fastidious in the revision of his prose, and in the end he smoothed and filed it with the same loving, lingering care that he bestowed upon his poems. As he wrote in one of his letters: 'There is only one critic I stand greatly in dread of; he becomes keener and more exacting every month; he is getting to be a dreadful fellow for me, and his name is T. B. Aldrich. There is no let up.'"

Farmers' Opinions on Stock Feeding

Obtaining Feed Economically Is Most Troublesome Problem of Breeders.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Producing or otherwise obtaining their feed economically is the most troublesome feeding problem of farmers who keep live stock. This was brought out emphatically through a questionnaire sent out by the United States Department of Agriculture which was answered by nearly 500 farmers scattered over the country. The replies showed that general economy of rations, the cost of grain, and the cost of protein represent about 52 per cent of the difficulties in feeding. These men classed balancing of rations next in importance. Other problems, such as labor, increasing production, difficulties in wintering stock, short pastures, and variety and palatability of feeds apparently were thought of only in connection with the principal difficulties. That these opinions are worth considering is borne out by the fact that all of the men questioned were progressive farmers and breeders, and the average period of their experience was 20 years. Adopt Balanced Rations.

During the two decades these stock raisers have been working to get ahead, many changes have taken place in the ways of feeding animals. The outstanding progressive step taken has been the wide adopting of the balanced ration. Other improvements in the order given by most of the five hundred farmers are more liberal feeding, feeding more legumes, better water supply, providing minerals, feeding according to production, feeding more protein, and more regular feeding. At the same time they list the common errors in feeding which are responsible for poor results, poor combinations of feeds being the one most frequently mentioned, followed by underfeeding as the next most effective reducer of profits. Following these in regular order, based on the number of times mentioned in the answers, come lack of protein, lack of water, lack of legumes, sudden changes of feed, poor housing parasites, lack of salt, waste of feed, poor equipment, and overfeeding. Practically all of these troubles are easily preventable.

Almost all of these 500 farmers had raised at one time or another scrubs, grades, and pure breeds, and almost to a man they joined in a paean of praise of the pure bred. Only 1 per cent of them reported that they had failed with improved stock. Most replies contained specific estimates showing the superiority of well-bred over random-bred animals, and when averaged it was brought out that these men consider that pure breeds make about 40 per cent better returns on feed used than common stock. It is interesting to note here that another questionnaire sent out by the department a year ago and answered by several hundred farmers showed that in their opinion pure breeds have a general utility value a little more than 40 per cent greater than common stock. Many Use Self-Feeders.

The report prepared by the department on the results of this feeding investigation contains many more interesting sidelights on feeding and corroborates a number of tendencies that good observers must have suspected. For instance, of 400 who answered questions regarding the use of self-feeders, 41.5 per cent had used this method of feeding, leaving about three-fifths yet to take up this economy. At present the self-feeder seems to be used mostly in hog raising districts and for poultry. In the Middle West more than half the farmers reporting used it. The general sentiment seems to be that this piece of equipment is especially suited to hogs and chickens, but a few farmers used it for feeding calves and sheep.

Nearly all of those who replied made comment on the feeding of silage, and practically 50 per cent of them use this feed. In the north-eastern states, where dairying is very generally followed, two-thirds of the farmers in the list have silos. Although most of the silage is fed to dairy cows, the list of animals to which it is fed, according to the questionnaire, includes also steers, breeding ewes, and brood sows. A few men reported feeding it in limited quantities to horses, hogs, and lambs. It is worth while to note that more than 22 per cent of these farmers who answered the government questions credited farm papers as the principal source of their knowledge of feeding problems. Other important sources mentioned were: Experience on home farm, general observation, bulletins, and books and records.

Darken Colt's Stall to Lessen Fly Irritation

Leave the colts in the barn while their mother is working in the field. Darken the colts' stalls to lessen the irritation from flies and give them access to clean feed at all times. This will give them a chance to develop and grow into much better individuals.

Profitable to Cull Flocks. It is just as profitable to keep the farm flock culled for wool and mutton as for eggs and white meat.

Walk Tells the Character.
A woman's character can be told by her walk. A martial tread indicates the soldierly type of woman. An energetic spirit, lively tongue and short temper are indicated by quick steps. The fast walker is usually a bustling, busy person, a good housekeeper and one who abhors dirt and dust. No tradesman would ever cheat her, remarks London Tit-Bits. A soft, timid tread is the step of the clinging, gentle woman, who relies entirely upon her husband. She will be essentially "feminine" and dainty. Turned-in toes indicate a preoccupied, absent-minded person. Calmness and reflection are betokened by slow steps, either long or short. A proud and haughty nature is found where the step is measured and slow, with the toes well turned out.

CONTENTED HEART

OLD JARED kept his little shop on the village street. Every day he sat cheerfully behind the crude counter handing out needles and thread and magazines and candies. At evening there was the excitement and neighborly visiting of customers coming for their city papers.

Behind the shop in two or three neat rooms Jared kept house, the black cat his purring companion. Jared was bent, and wrinkled, and kindly. This same village had been his home since boyhood. His wife had died many years ago, and his only sister married a man who had gone on rapidly to success.

Both the sister and her husband, who lived in an adjoining city, were gone now, leaving two daughters. One, Elizabeth, married and prosperous; the other, Janey, Jared recalled as "the little one."

The two young nieces were now away at boarding school, and Janey found more time to herself. "Why," she asked, looking up from Uncle Jared's last letter, "do we never go to see Uncle Jared? He was mother's own brother."

"Why," returned Elizabeth, "should we? A queer old hermit. I shall never forget his appearance at mother's funeral."

"Poor mother," sighed Janey, "she knew sorrow indeed when father lost his money in investment."

"Well," Elizabeth dryly returned, "I guess father suffered, too, even though he was not dependent for happiness on the things money can buy. Worry over mother's disappointment shortened his days, I think. My, what a cheerful topic we've started. I'm off for the Richmond's tea."

It was strange, as one could reach Uncle Jared's village in an hour or two.

When her sister had driven away Janey slipped into her suit coat, picked up her purse and went for the trolley. She entered Uncle Jared's little shop in the late afternoon.

"Why, how do you do?" he faltered; "can this really be the little one?"

Janey smiled. "I used to be little, Uncle Jared; I'm Janey. I have come to visit you for a while, if I may."

His trembling hand closed over her warm one, his keen, kindly eyes searching her sweet young face.

"You are like your father," said Uncle Jared. "Sometimes he used to drop over to spend a night with me, though I don't know as any one ever knew it. A fine man, your father, my dear."

Next morning Janey presented herself in her sister's home, happy excitement in the flush of her cheeks.

"I'm going to live with Uncle Jared," she announced. "I love it there, among the hills. I shall wait on the shop, and prepare his meals in the pretty room. We need each other; Uncle Jared and I are alone."

"To think!" said the old man when she returned to him, "that the Lord more than answered my prayer. I prayed even if it may not be kin, Oh Lord, send, please, some friendly soul, that I may not end my days alone. And He sent kin, indeed."

Janey's soft cheek was against the wrinkled one. "The nearest of kin," she told him.

Elizabeth's husband said that they must have her back, when the girls came home from school. He missed the restfulness of Janey's presence in his wife's hurried living, the helpfulness of little tasks that Janey had never been too hurried to accomplish.

Uncle Jared went to sleep one morning. Janey could not grieve for him; it was such a peaceful sleep, and his last days had been so full of content. He left the little shop to Janey, and when Elizabeth learned that her sister intended to continue on there as old Jared had done, she lifted her shoulders not comprehending.

Janey was allowed no hour of loneliness by friendly village folk, who said their good nights as she put out the lights, and greeted her with the opening of the door each morning. Uncle Jared's old friends still came at evening to talk with her about him, and the children had parties in the rooms behind the little shop.

Then one day came a pleasant, distinguished stranger to bargain for the land on which the shop stood.

"We are running the trolley through here," the young man explained, "and your uncle held off for the biggest price. He wanted you to receive the benefit."

Janey thought the price named was very big, indeed, and she told him so. "The land is worth all that to us," he said.

Advised by the village lawyer, Janey made the sale.

The agent of transaction stayed at the hotel in the village, and further advised Janey regarding the buying of the newest new bungalow.

The name of the company's man was Richard Train, who was skilled in engineering. He was a most willing and helpful young man, and he liked to help Janey, as she tenderly preserved Uncle Jared's belongings.

"I have been happy here," Janey told him, as she closed forever the little shop door.

"You will be happy any place," Richard Train answered, softly, "for you have the gift of a contented heart."

And when Richard Train was able to add to Janey's heart the greater gift of love—why, then Richard married Janey.

Island Once Pirate Lair?

The Galapagos Islands lie under the equator off the coast of Ecuador. The air is frequently chilly, due to the cold antarctic currents which fan the coast of Peru and strike seaward toward the island group. Wild goats, cattle, cats and dogs, as well as hidden treasure, bear evidence of pirates. The soil is rich red loam, nearly stoneless. There are but 3,500 head of cattle at present on Cristobal island and it can easily support 50,000. It is said that a three-year-old steer brings $100 (gold) live weight, at Guayaquil on the mainland—when a steamer can be induced to call and take the stock off.

MRS. GEORGE WOLFE DEAD.

Mrs. George F. Wolfe died at her home on North Maple street, Lancaster, Tuesday afternoon. She had been ill for over a year. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Gladys, of the home, and one brother Weldon Heffner, of Amanda.

Funeral services were held at the First Methodist Episcopal church Thursday afternoon at 1:30 central standard time. Burial was made in the Stoutsville cemetery.

LAURELVILLE

Visited by Fire Friday Night and House of William Stumpf Burned.

The two story frame house of William F. Stumpf was destroyed by fire nine o'clock Friday night. The house was completely gutted by fire. The home was formerly owned and occupied by Harvey Riegel, an uncle of Manager Earl W. Lutz of the Citizens Telephone company of this city.

The Laurelville fire apparatus, a 35 horse power pumping engine mounted on a truck was dragged to Laurel creek where water was pumped. The firemen, a volunteer company, were assisted by visitors at the Pumpkin show. The origin of the fire is unknown but it is thought that it may have originated from some rubbish deposited near the house. The house was valued at $5000 with insurance of $1600 in the Hummel & Plum agency.

INTRUDER FOUND AT WORK.

Returning to her home Tuesday night, Mrs. W. I. Hanna, 1249 Hamlet street, Columbus, found a young colored man at her ice box helping himself to a delicatessen meal. He made a hurried exit. Upon investigation it was found that the house had been ransacked, but nothing taken. Entrance was gained thru an open casement window.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanna formerly lived in this city.

WILL USE GAS IN FUTURE WARS

Entire Armies Will Be Put to Sleep and Made Prisoner, Says U. S. Chemist.

New York.—Whole armies put to sleep and taken prisoner in gas warfare is by no means an impossibility 25 years hence, Col. Raymond F. Bacon, chief of the technical division of the chemical warfare service, A. E. F., says in a description of the possibilities of the future art of war made public by the American Chemical society.

The $2,000,000 spent on the research organization did more toward winning the war, Colonel Bacon asserts, than any $200,000,000 spent in other ways.

Great Lesson of the War.

One of the greatest lessons of the war has so far gone almost unheeded, according to Colonel Bacon, who continues:

"To say the use of gas in warfare must be abolished is almost the same as saying that no progress must be made in the art of warfare toward making it more efficient or more humane."

"If one reads of the great battles of history, one will find that the victorious general conquered his enemy usually because of the fact that he so chose his position as to have his flank protected by river, mountain range or some naturally strong barrier."

"Much of the strategy of these battles consisted in maneuvering so as to obtain the advantage of position. With the use of gas it is possible to saturate a piece of ground so that no troops can cross it, and thus make an artificial barrier for the flank or protect the lines of communication. Moreover, these artificial barriers can be kept barriers for just as short a time as the strategy of the particular battle demands."

"These are but hints, but show the tremendous unexploited possibilities of gas in warfare."

Imagine Hand-to-Hand Battles.

"One can easily imagine the situation at the time the fighting was hand to hand with the spear or the sword, and gunpowder was first introduced, which in those days, perhaps, permitted the antagonists to fight at a range of 100 or 200 yards. There must have been a great outcry as to prohibiting the horrible new mode of warfare, and it must have been felt that it was very unfair to stand off 200 yards rather than to meet in combat man to man. "But no one looking back on that period would attempt to say it was possible to have stayed the hand of progress and to have prevented by any legislation or agreement the use of gunpowder in warfare."

"Moreover, the consensus of opinion today would be that the hand-to-hand fighting with spear and sword was more cruel and inhumane than the fighting with the gun and the bullet. Similarly, at the present time we cannot effectually stay the progress of science, and to attempt to do so is not only unwise but is also preventing the possibilities of a really more humane type of war."

Australia Will Have Capital Like the U. S.

Melbourne.—The next session of the Australian parliament will be in Canberra, the new federal capital which, like Washington, D. C., is a city located and planned for the special purpose of being a national capital. The Australian capital was laid out by an American architect, Walter Burley Griffin of Chicago.

Canberra is situated on a splendid undulating plateau about 2,000 feet above sea level, a little to the north of the highest peaks of the Australian Alps.

The city site is divided by three large sheets of water, supplied by the sluggish Molonglo river, and adorned by parks and boulevards. The parliament house and government buildings will face a central lake, with streets laid out in octagonal form around them. On one side will be a fan-shaped residential quarter; on the other the university, municipal and industrial centers.

Main thoroughfares will radiate from the parliament building.

Blind Man Has Read Bible Through 15 Times

Middletown, Conn.—The feat of reading the Bible through 15 times in raised print has been completed by Urban L. Penney, a blind man of Winsted. It has taken him almost fifty years to complete the task. He has now started out to read the Bible through for the sixteenth time, although some of the volumes are in tatters in places from much handling. Mr. Penney learned the raised type at Perkins Institution in Boston in the early 70s from the late Dr. Samuel G. Howe.

Snakes Spoiled His Fishing.

Sacramento, Cal.—James Remick, local auto accessory merchant, has just returned from a fishing trip in the wilds of Sierra county. Remick says, with much impressiveness, that in the stream where he angled for the elusive trout large and apparently hungry snakes grabbed the fish as fast as he hooked them. When Remick discovered what was happening, he simply wound up his line, declaring the competition was too keen.

GENEVA I. BENNETT DEAD.

Geneva I. Bennett, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Bennett, of Yellowbud, died at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shasteen, 236 Park street, Chillicothe, Wednesday at 8:40 p. m. The baby was born in Yellowbud April 9, 1923, and had been ill for the past five weeks. The parents, six brothers and one sister survive.

Funeral services from 236 Park street, Chillicothe, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Paulin officiated. Burial in Springbank cemetery.

BURIAL OF INFANT.

A stillborn child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Vanscoy of Dayton, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fowler, on East Water street Friday, September 21, 1923. Interment was in Forest cemetery Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

"The Store That Treats You Right"

Another Sparkling Compliment To Colwell & Katz's Integrity.

The wife of a customer we have served for a long while came to us the other day with the unusual request that we keep for her and take care of a 2 carat ring.

"My husband left the city today and I didn't want to keep this in the house while I was alone," she explained.

Of course we suggested a bank which is the proper place for valuables, but she was firm.

Now then, when the young wife of an old customer turns to us for safety and trusts us with the safeguarding of a $2,200 ring—doesn't it follow that the man needing Fall clothing is pretty safe to trust us with his $35 to $50?
